HOPE FADING AWAY.

The President Believed to Be at Death's Door.

Garfield Seized With a Rigor and His Pulse Rises to 137.

His Condition Most Critical and the Greatest Apprehension Expressed.

The Post-Dispatch Specials Proved to Be True—Official Bulletins—The Crisis Near at Hand.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONG BRANCH, September 17.—The President's condition is about the same. The fundamental causes are all unchanged. His danger is at great as ever. His strength grows less and less. Yet the morning bulletin pointed only to the superficial indications, and, ignoring the inherent constitutional cause, is not as unfavorable as the real situation. Even Dr. Bliss has at last been forced to confess the lamentable truth. He now admits everything he so positively denied every day and almost every hour of the last week. The following part of an interview is an official confession and shows how disgracefully Dr. Bliss has lied in the past:

"What has caused the increase of blood poisoning."

"The same conditions that caused it before. The seftic condition occurred in his case, and we called it septicaemia. Whether it may now be called pyaemia or not is a question of terms, regarding which the authorities differ."

"Is there well-grounded cause for alarm?"

"I suppose there is justification for anxiety? Any considerable increase of blood poisoning in a man as feeble as he is is alarming. Though rather say that the President's condition is a source of grave apprehension."

"Suppose the symptoms should increase?"

"Then there would be so much the more reason for apprehension. The blood poisoning is evidently more intense than it was three days ago."

"Is the President worse than he has been at any time since his arrival in Long Branch?"

"He is in worse hazard now than he has been at any time since his removal."

Dr. Boynton, who, it should be remembered, is not only the President's cousin, but an able and accomplished physician, said that the President is very much troubled by paroxysms of coughing that rack him severely and raise the pulse; that they would look bad; that there has been a general letting down of the vital forces; that his pulse shows great weakness of the whole system and of the heart in particular, and that his mind is not as bright as usual. In conclusion Dr. Boynton said: "I realize more and more every day that this blood poisoning has got a terrible grip on him. From a medical standpoint the chances are certainly against him."

To sum up, the President has been here eleven days without any improvement. He has chronic blood poisoning. He has an abscess on the lung or rather a number of small abscesses or pus pockets. He has a burning fever, and is often delirious. His body is covered with a number of pus boils and bed sores. His face is still very sore and suppurating from the parotid gland trouble, which left both ear and jaw affected. He has three wounds on his back. He has a hole in his body estimated to measure at least sixteen inches. He has two ribs shattered, and a bullet, no one knows exactly where. His stomach is so weak that he can only take liquid nourishment. His bowels are weak from the time when he could take nothing by the mouth and when life was only saved by injections or enemas. Nearly every night the fever drives the pulse up to 130 beats per minute. He has no appetite, but takes the food like medicine, reluctantly. He does not assimilate his food well. It barely maintains life, but does not give strength by making pure blood. Worse than all, the long suppurating wound serves as a generator of pus, which, as it cannot discharge, turns into poison and keeps the blood in its poisoned condition. The President's suffering may last days and it may last weeks. No one can venture an opinion as to when his terrible suffering will end, but it is only a question of time. He is slowly wasting away.

Prepare For the Worst.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONG BRANCH, September 17, 1:50 P. M.—The President has just had a rigor or chill, lasting nearly half an hour, and driving up the pulse to about 140 beats per minute. This is a most alarming sign. It indicates a change of the blood poisoning from the chronic to the acute character. Should it be followed by another rigor soon there could be no doubt about it. In that case it would only be a question of hours, or a very few days at best. There is great excitement and despondency at the President's cottage.

The Danger Immediate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONG BRANCH, September 17, 2 P. M.—The physicians now all admit that the President's condition is most alarming and critical. The danger is now more immediate than any time since the Saturday four weeks ago, when even Dr. Bliss gave up the President.

The Danger Great and Grave.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONG BRANCH, September 17, 2:30 P.M.—The President is easier, the pulse has gone down again, though the doctors do not say what it is. After the rigor or chill he was given brandy and water, but his stomach rejected both and he threw up a little. All the physicians look blue and sad. They say the danger is grave and great.

Bulletins.

UNOFFICIAL—8:30 A. M.

ELBERON, September 17, 8:30 A. M.—The morning report will, no doubt, be favorable. C. O. Rockwell, the President's cousin, watched with him the greater part of the night. He says the President slept well the most of the night, and his temperature and pulse are lower than last evening. Weather clear.

8:45 A. M.

ELBERON, September 17.—The morning bulletin will be late, as the physicians have just gone to the President's cottage. Attorney-General MacVeagh says the discharge from the wound is not as unhealthy in appearance as it was last evening, and the wound looks much better. The coughing spells are less frequent, and the amount of matter passed is small.

OFFICIAL—9 A. M.

ELBERON, September 17.—At the morning examination and dressing of the President the temperature was 99.8, pulse 106 and respiration 21. The fluctuations of the pulse during the night varied from 116 to 130, the temperature during this time not deviating much from normal. He slept quite well, taking nourishment at proper intervals. His cough was not troublesome and the expectoration moderate. The discharge from the wound is more healthy and the color of the granulations slightly improved.

12:45 P. M.

ELBERON, September 17, 12:05 P. M.—The President had a rigor between 11 and 12 o'clock this morning, lasting about half an hour. The pulse ran up to 137, and at this hour, 12:45, the pulse is about 120.

1 P. M.

ELBERON, September 17, 1 P. M.—The President had a rigor about 11 o'clock this morning. It lasted about twenty minutes, during which time the pulse ran up to 137. After the rigor passed off the President vomited considerably. His pulse at this hour has decreased to 120, the temperature being 101 and respiration 24. The situation is decidedly critical, inasmuch as there is great probability that more chills will occur. It now transpires that there were indications of a rigor yesterday. The President also suffered from over-eating last night, being troubled with pains in his stomach. Dr. Boynton, in answer to inquiries shortly after the rigor became known, said it was one of many unfavorable symptoms which must be looked for at this stage of the case, at the same time repeating the remarks made heretofore, to the effect that everything terrible follows the existence of chronic pyæmia. Great apprehension prevails.

1:30 P. M.

LONG BRANCH, September 17, 1:30 P. M.—After the rigor passed off, the President commenced perspiring freely. During the prevalence of the rigor the patient was delirious.

2:30 P. M.

ELBERON, September 17.—Up to this time no further rigors have occurred. The last information from the sick room was that the patient was more comfortable. The patient's pulse remains at 120 and temperature and respiration are still high. The occurrence of rigor at this time is conceded as evidence of acute pyæmia and great fears are that other chills will follow.

Pulse 102.

ELBERON, September 17.—Dr. Bliss says the President's pulse is now 102. His general condition is unchanged. Assistant Secretary of State Hill arrived this morning.

No Change for the Better.

ELBERON, September 17.—Dr. Bliss does not think there has been any marked change for the better in the President's case. The wound, however, looks better this morning, the pus being of a more healthy character. Suppuration from the parotid is a trifle less than it has been. The lung trouble has not increased in area, and is considered to be in a better condition. The cough is less annoying, and expectoration not so exhaustive. A better day than yesterday is expected. The pulse is now 106.

Blood Injected.

ELBERON, September 17.—Dr. Boynton says he feels better about the President's condition this morning than he did yesterday morning. He does not consider there is any marked improvement, however, excepting that the wound looks better. The Cabinet is expected this evening.

Defibrinated beef blood is being administered to the President by enemata. Arrangements are being made to have fresh blood brought here daily. The patient had two ounces last night and three ounces this morning. Good results are expected from this treatment.

Abscesses on the Lungs.

NEW YORK, September 17.—From the Post's Long Branch special: Dr. Boynton says there has been a slight subsidence of the aggravated symptoms of yesterday. He looks to a quieter day. The President's mind is rather clearer and brighter. Last night he was flighty and the pulse fluctuated as usual. There was some fever, but not so much as on the previous night. Referring to the discharge of clots of blood from the wound, Dr. Boynton said it had no particular significance, except that it shows an unhealty state of the wound, and is of the character of bad pus. He spoke of the lung trouble as coming from a number of small abscesses rather than one large abscess. They begin in inflammation and culminate in suppuration, ultimately breaking down the tissues. Some of these small abscesses might have begun some time ago, and others may be forming now. In answer to an inquiry whether there was ground for considering the change to-day a positive improvement, he said it was too early to give an opinion on that. There had been for a moment a slight apparent amelioration of the symptoms. Nothing could be decided upon such a temporary incident in a case of this sort.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL MACVEAGH

says there is a slight check in the bad symptoms, and that is all that can be said from the tone of the physicians. Being asked whether any sudden change was to be expected in the next forty-eight hours, he said he looked for a stationary condition and possibly for a slight improvement in that time.

The Welland Canal.

ST. CATHERINES, ONT., September 17.—The New Welland Canal has been successfully opened by the passage of the American steamer D. M. Dickinson. She was towed through from Port Dalhousa to lock 24 by the tug Harvey Neeton, both gaily decked with bunting. Average time of lockage, 28 minutes.

Wholesale Murder.

ROCKLAND, ME., September 17.—Charles Smith, a laborer, last night shot and killed his wife, infant son and mother-in-law, and attempted to kill Mrs. Metcalf, an old lady living in the house, but she with two children escaped. The murderer gave himself up. Cause, jealousy of wife.

Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, September 17.—Loans, decrease $466,100; specie, increase $478,000; legal tenders, decrease $514,600; deposits, increase $1,921,300; circulation, increase $3,600; reserve, decrease $516,925. The banks now hold $454,125 in excess of the legal requirements.

Steamer Ashore.

VINEYARD HAVEN, September 17.—The Belgian Steamer Daniel Steinman is ashore on West Chop. She lies on a rough and rocky bottom.

The Coffee Supply.

RIO JANEIRO, September 17.—The coffee supplies are very large.

FOREIGN NEWS.

England.

LONDON, September 17.—Bishop Payne, of Baltimore, presided at the Methodist Ecumencial Council to day. Resolutions condemning the opium traffic and calling on the Government to deliver the country from the guilt of supporting it was passed. Bishop Peck strongly advocated both resolutions. Rev. Mr. Green, of the Southern Church, read a paper on the missionary work of Methodism abroad.

THANKED BY LOWELL.

Previous to closing the Trades Union Congress to-day, a letter from the American Minister, Lowell, was read, thanking the congress for the friendly and sympathetic feelings it had expressed relative to President Garfield. A resolution was passed calling on Parliament for an act strictly prohibiting commercial corners.

Germany.

LONDON, September 17.—A dispatch from Rome says Cardinal Micesslaw Ledochowsky has transmitted to the Pope a formal notice of his resignation of the diocese of Posen on account of ill health. Before making this announcement public the Vatican communicated with Prussia in regard to providing for the vacancy. An Envoy will go to Varzin to submit to Bismarck a list of Bishops the Vatican proposes to nominate.

Ireland.

DUBLIN, September 17.—On the reassembling of the National League Convention Parnell announced a resolution calling upon the farmers to prove their sympathy with the laborers by raising dwellings for them and enabling them to live in something like decency and comfort. This was the outcome of the conference between the league executive and the laborers' delegates.

France.

PARIS, September 17.—Under the head of food, and compared with 1880, the import returns of the first eight months of 1881 show a diminution of 124,100,000 francs; exports a diminution of 84,800,000 francs.

A TRAIN ROBBER BAGGED.

An Escaped Convict Arrested by a Posse Last Night.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, MO., September 17.—About 10 o'clock last night an armed posse, under Deputy Marshal Holland, left Independence for the scene of the late robbing of the C. & A. Having received information that J. W. Bushfield, an escaped convict from the Missouri Penitentiary, was one of the robbers, the home of his father-in-law, Milt Dallman, was surrounded and Bushfield called out, when he was placed under arrest and taken to Independence, where he is now lodged in jail. He claims that he can prove his whereabouts on the night of the robbery and his innocence. About eight years ago he was sentenced to the Penitentiary for forgery, and after serving eighteen months escaped, since which time he has been at large. If innocent of the robbery he will be returned to serve out his unexpired term.

It rained hard all yesterday, but cleared off during the night. A white frost was noticed this morning. The Fair was slimly attended yesterday, but to-day there is a large crowd present. The success of the exposition is immense.

THE LEADER OF THE GANG.

CHICAGO, September 17.—A. S. Trude, who went from here as special counsel for the Chicago and Alton Railroad in ferreting out the facts regarding the recent train robbery, states that his trip was brought about by a visit to the headquarters of the Chicago and Alton in this city of a middle-aged woman who ten days ago gave the company some valuable pointers leading to the apprehension of the outlaws. She revealed the fact that certain dark and mysterious conferences had been held in the house of Si Chapman near the scene of the robbery and gave the names of the participants. As a result of her talk and subsequent investigation Trude believes the robbery was planned by a man named Clark, an expert professional train robber formerly associated with the notorious Hoosier Bill. The renegade Clark is ostensibly a cattle dealer in Missouri. Trude thinks his assistants were hoodlums, green at the business, who believed their leader was Jesse James. The day following the robbery Clark lost sums of money in Kansas City keno dives and raised more by spouting jewelry. The mysterious woman had been ruined and deserted by two of the outlaws, and has long been waiting revenge. The gang were informed of her mission so early that same of them escaped, but more important arrests are expected. In this connection an officer of the C. & A. R. R. Co. stated their road had served a notice on the Missouri authorities that they will be held responsible for the damages resulting, as the authorities of Pittsburg were in 1876.

Attempted Wife Murder and Suicide.

PITTSBURG, September 17.—This morning about 6 o'clock Andrew Kountzman, a German shoemaker, living in the East End, made an attempt on the life of his wife and that of a man named Joseph Mentzer, a boarder in Kountzman's house, by assaulting them with a piece of iron. After knocking them senseless Kountzman committed suicide by cutting his throat. Mrs. Kountzman is in a critical condition and will hardly recover. Mentzer is not badly hurt. Kountzman had just been released from jail, where he had been incarcerated for a petty theft, and imagined his wife's affections had been estranged by Mentzer.

The Price of Coal.

PITTSBURG, September 17.—General Secretary Jones, of the Coal Miners' Association, has given notice to the retail operators that if the price of coal is not reduced within one week another strike will be inaugurated by the miners for an advance to five cents per bushel for mining. The operators have lately conceded the miners' advance from three and a half to four cents, and at the same time raised the retail price of coal to eleven cents. Secretary Jones claims that this advance is unnecessary and extortionate.

"I DID WHIP HER."

Mrs. Boyd's Account of Horsewhipping Mrs. Sherwood.

WASHINGTON, September 17.—Mrs. S Boyd's account of the cowhiding sensation here is that she had just heard of the death of her grandchild, and was driving to the Census Bureau, on which Col. Boyd holds a position, to tell him of it. She says on the way she saw Boyd walking arm in arm with Mrs. Henrietta Sherwood, who lives here; that Boyd has been intimate with Mrs. Sherwood for several years and in spite of all his wife's remonstrances has maintained the intimacy. Mrs. Boyd says that in her indignation she snatched the buggy whip, jumped out and laid it vigorously over the shoulder of Mrs. Sherwood. Mrs. Boyd added: "If you publish anything about it put in the name of that woman, Mrs. Sherwood. Col. Boyd don't care what is said about it in the papers if he can screen Mrs. Sherwood. I did whip her, and I want her name published."

Sergeant Mason Writes a Card.

WASHINGTON, September 16.—Sergeant Mason, who shot at Guiteau, has written an address to the American people which will be published to-day. His address is rather disconnected and incoherent and was evidently prepared by himself. He admits that his act was unsoldierly but maintains his justification for it. He refers to Guiteau as a miserable wretch, who deserves no consideration such as a man is entitled to. Mason's address was written in reply to some newspaper article saying he would have been guilty of murder had he killed Guiteau. Mason denies this. It would not have been murder for him to have killed a cowardly assassin who had shot down the President. Mason further says that he does not think soldiers should be required to guard a dog like Guiteau. That while he and other soldiers were outside exposed to rain and bad weather Guiteau, an assassin, was well housed and well fed. That jail guards are sheltered from the weather and receive $100 per month for their service, while he and other soldier guards get only $13 per month. He refers particularly to his poor wife and children, and says he does not want to bear the brand of a would-be murderer for their sakes. Mason maintains that he did right and says his only regret is that he made a poor shot, that he did not kill Guiteau. This address is not in the least af a whining or sentimental order. Mason evidently expects to be punished, and seems prepared to stand his punishment, but he holds in effect that Guiteau deserves summary punishment, and that he was justifiable in attempting to kill him.

HOMEOPATHIC FEUD.

Dr. Valentine Takes up the Scalpel Against That "Other" College.

The war between the factions of the Homeopathic physicians breaks out in a new place. A few weeks ago challenges to mortal combat were being sent around. The colleges are about to open. The Health Commissisner has set apart hours for lectures by one representative of this school of medicine. But there are two homeopathic colleges. It can hardly be expected that the students of both will sit together and listen to these lectures without the spilling of blood. The college headed by Dr. Valentine, Tenth and Carr, gets the lecturer, Dr. Parsons, but, not satisfied with this, wants the students and professors of the other excluded from any benefits. The "other" is known as the "Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri," but Dr. Valentine and his associates claim that the name has been assumed illegally. The institution on Tenth and Carr is known as the "St. Louis College of Homeopathic Physicians and Surgeons," but the faculty and trustees also maintain as a form the old organization of the "Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri," and claim that the use of the name by the other faction headed by Dr. Richardson is, as said, an illegal assumption.

Dr. Valentine entered his protest to any recognition of the Richardson college or its students, laying a lengthy affidavit before Mr. Francis this morning. The Doctor says:

Philo G. Valentine, of lawful age, being duly sworn, deposes and says that the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri, of whose Board of Trustees he is a member and business manager will deliver no lectures during the session of 1881 and 1882; that the board of trustees of said institution is composed of C. W. Spalding, president; S. B. Parsons, secretary; William Collison, treasurer; P. G. Valentine (the affiant), business manager; G. S. Walker, J. Martine Kershaw, Charles Vastine, Adolph Uhlemeyer and James A. Campbell, members; that the said board of trustees is and continuously has been in possession of the college building on Tenth and Carr streets, in the city of St. Louis; that it has permitted no one to use its name or to lecture or teach under its charter or within its building, and that the catalogue and announcement issued by one Wm. C. Richardson, P. A. Phelan and others purporting to be the 23d annual commencement of the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri is unauthorized by them and void; that none of the parties whose names appear in the aforesaid announcement as members of the faculty of the board of trustees of the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri are members of said board or faculty; and the board of trustees of the said college, whose names are hereinbefore mentioned by affiant, their business manager, now represent to the Board of Health that they object to the granting to the persons who falsely and fraudulently claim to constitute the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri any of the rights and privileges granted to medical colleges under the laws of the State, city or rules of the board so long as the said persons shall falsely and fraudulently claim to be the Homeopathic Medical College of Missouri.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Mrs. Sidney Long of East St. Louis and Mrs. Fred. Stansbury of North St. Louis are on an extended visit to relatives at Effingham, Ill.

James Nelson, a negro, was held to appear before the grand jury in the sum of $300 by 'Squire Graney for grand larceny this morning.

A few days ago J. M. Johnston had warrants issued before 'Squire Graney for the arrest of a few Island thugs who have been waylaying newspaper carriers and beating and robbing them. Thus far no arrests have been made, which seems very strange.

Mrs. Andrew McKinley is in the country visiting her niece, Mrs. Judge Hunton, and will not return until the early part of next week.

Mr. R. R. Hutchinson, the cashier of the Mechanics' Bank, has left the city for a week's trip to Chicago and the Northern lakes.

Mrs. Ann Worthington left the city Tuesday morning on the Gem City for a three weeks' visit to her sister, Mrs. Able, of Rock Island.

Mrs. Guthers, of 2645 Washington avenue, with her sister, Miss Murphy, has returned from Minnesota. Mr. Guthers will be home next week.

Mrs. J. L. Chapman from Mississippi, is expected here on a visit to her sister Mrs. A. J. Mitchell at the Barrett Flats, Washington Ave.

Dr. and Mrs. McGuidee, from Fort Leavenworth, are in the city on a short visit to Mrs. McGuidee's father, Mr. Larkins, of 1600 Lucas Place.

Mr. Robert Switzer has returned from Montana and expects to join his family abroad. He will probably sail about the end of the month.

Messrs. Alonzo Church, Jas. Garneau and J. D. Lindsay arrived in New York on the City of Brussels a few days since, and are now in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tracy are again in their city home, having passed a pleasant summer at their beautiful suburban residence on the Narrow Gauge.

Miss Hattie Portis, daughter of Thomas J. Portis, attorney of the Pacific Railroad, was at last accounts, having a charming time at the Falls of Niagara.

Mr. Pollak, of Greenville, Miss., after a few days' sojourn in our city, will return to his Southern home with well-filled pockets, having made over $100,000 on wheat.

Mr. R. M. Hammon, of the Travelers' Insurance Company, returned home last Friday morning from Pennsylvania, and left the same evening for Little Rock, Ark.

Miss Hattie Glenn leaves town on Thursday night for Topeka, to be absent until the 1st. Miss Glenn has just returned from Green Bay, where she was much admired.

Among the recent arrivals at the Beaumont Flats are Prof. Hammond, of the Law School, with his wife and daughters, and Mrs. Churchill and the Misses Churchill.

The ladies propose to surpass their former splendor in this year's preparations for the Veiled Prophets' ball, but the toilet of each fair one is, so far, a profound secret.

The Methodists will give an elegant entertainment at the Orphans' Home to the ministers who are expected here to attend their conference. Mrs. John O'Fallon will preside.

Miss Alice King, one of Mrs. Cuthbert's last year's graduates, passed through the city this week en route for Keokuk, where she is to pay a visit to one of her schoolmates.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Carr are with Col. J. L. D. Morrison. Mrs. Carr is still remarkable for that beauty which placed in her hands the sceptre of belleship so gracefully wielded for several years.

Miss Katie Page of St. Louis, has left Fortress Monroe, and has gone with her uncle, Gen. N. W. Brown, U. S. A., to Washington, where she will remain until after the Centennial at Yorktown.

Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Johnston have returned from their extended trip to the Blue Grass regions of Kentucky, and will be glad to receive their friends at their new residence No. 2026 Pine street.

Dr. Hobson, one of the leading physicians of Hot Springs, Ark., is in St. Louis for a few days, having come here with the purpose of placing his only daughter at Mrs. Cuthbert's far-famed seminary.

Miss Maggie Van Studdiford is said to have at last made a choice among her many lovers, and is now fiancee to Dr. John O'F. Delaney. Miss Van Studdiford looks remarkably well after her summer North.

Miss Mary Hogan is one of the finest elocutionists in the city. Many of her friends are anxious for her to try the stage, as her grace and beauty would go far in aid of her talents to win her the laurels of a successful career.

Mrs. George Hayward and her daughter, Miss Florence Hayward, have just returned from Narragansett Pier and New York. Miss Fa nita Hayward, who spent the summer in Milwaukee and Oconomowoc, is also at home.

A foot-race will take place to-day at the Athletic Club Grounds, on Nineteenth and Pine. It will be a hundred-yard dash between Messrs. W. F. Wickham, Ed. Sturgeon, Dav. Breckenridge, Frank Bryan, Louis Boisliniere and James Garneau.

Mr. and Mrs. Junius Johnson, who have been some time at the Lindell, will leave early in September for a farm in the blue grass regions of Kentucky. The diamonds that were stolen from Mrs. Johnson, last spring, at the Southern, have never been recovered.

Mrs. Huntington Smith wears a very elegant toilet this fall of black silk, with crimson silk basque covered with black Spanish lace. The hat is made to correspond, of crimson silk, adorned with black silk, encircled by a wreath of full-blown poppies and poppy buds.

Miss Mattie Barrett wears a lovely dress of cream colored taffeta, adorned with bands of delicately embroidered flowers. With this costume is worn a black lace hat with cluster of cream-tinted roses at the side. Miss Barrett will be one of October's most beautiful brides.

Messrs. John and Taylor Bryan have been visiting Canada, before returning to Princeton, and are now at Quebec. They write enthusiastically of that city on the Plains of Abraham, remarking especially on the beauty of the chruch of the Jesuits and the grandeur of the Falls of Montmorenci.

This season will witness the debut of many lovely girls, among whom are Miss Hattie Glenn, niece of Mr. E. C. Simmons; Miss Nellie Knapp, a daughter of Mr. George Knapp; Miss Mary Hopkins, a gay, brown-haired young lady, daughter of Mrs. Hopkins, of Pine street; Miss May Hewitt, daughter of Mrs. Julia Hewitt; Miss Mimi Morrison, a bright young beauty, the daughter of Col. J. L. D. Morrison; Miss Lee, daughter of ex-Advocate General John F. Lee, of Washington; Miss Lily Wooldridge, daughter of Mrs. Abraham Nave, who has already gathered many laurels at the White Sulphur this summer; Miss Lutie Shepley, daughter of John R. Shepley; Miss Lutie Kennett, daughter of Wm. C. Kennett, and Miss Delphine Turner, a perfect blonde, daughter of Maj. Henry S. Turner, of Lucas Place.

Reviewing the German Guard Corps.

Berlin Letter to the London Times.

The march past was executed twice by all arms, first by the infantry in company formation and then in dense columns of regiments, to the sound of fife and drum. The general physique of the men, about a third of whom may have been first-year recruits, was good but it was by no means imposing. There was also a certain degree of looseness in the setting up of the men which, to the English eye, would appear to detract from the ideal character of the body of troops that form the flower of the most efficient army in Europe. Then, as to height, it certainly seemed that not more than twenty-five per cent of the infantry came up to the six-foot standard; though it is the commonest thing in the world to hear the Prussian guards written and talked of as being formidably superior to all other troops, by reason not only of their discipline, but also of their physique. With a copious admixture of reserves and Landwehr men on a war footing they might possibly be so, but as they appeared to-day to the eye of the impartial observer the best of them assuredly did not look at all equal to the household troops of England. Nothing, however, but praise can be said of their efficiency in drill, as manifested, at least, by the way in which they passed the saluting point to-day. The peculiar way they step out on parade, lifting the foot from the hip instead of from the knee, and keeping their eyes, not to the front, as in England, but fixed on the reviewing commander, as if the perception of orders were a thing of sight instead of hearing, all gives an appearance of machine-like pecision and rigidity, which, though very artificial, is very effective.

A Panorama of Waterloo.

From the New York Herald.

A very interesting panorama of the battle of Waterloo, which was one of the sensations of Brussels last year, has been shown at London this year and has made a hit. An ingenious device in the arrangement deserves to be mentioned. In the foreground there are real turf and prostrate tree-trunks, with the leaves so merging into the painting that it is impossible to tell where one ends and the other begins. The artist shows the death of Picton and the advance of Ney at the head of the guard, and indicates the arrival of Blucher. Thus it is that Art annihilates Time! It was about 7:30 p. m. when the assault of the Imperial Guard was delivered, and Ziethen appeared on Wellington's left, relieving the pressure on the British center, while Picton was killed early in the afternoon, about 2 o'clock. This reminds one of the interesting art criticism in the London Times upon Mr. Woodville's picture, "The Ninety-second Highlanders and Second Gourkhas Storming Mullah Sahibdad," in which the dictum was recorded, "They are essentially storming Candahar—that is the point of the picture, and no one can mistake it." It has always been believed by a wicked and misinformed generation that Gen. Roberts didn't storm Candahar at all, but relieved it.

QUAINT QUEBEC.

A Mediæval City on American Soil Full of Strange Sights.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, September 14.—"Home again" is so trite a saying that I'll have none of it; yet, nevertheless, here I am, ready for a siege—or rather to lay a siege. Time I was home, too—the way things are going. Have you read about my "test case" before the Supreme Court of this grand old Bay State of ours, and how they have ruled me out? Well, if you haven't I'm glad of it, for I don't very well like this becoming such a public character, and so I'm sure I shan't tell you anything about it. I have no idea of "writing up" myself. But if you have read of it, why let's just shake hands, and "better luck next time." And now if I can manage to secure a corner of the magic carpet on which to waft myself back to the spot from which I last wrote you—oh, yes, strange, quaint, wonderful old Quebec! Who that has not seen it would believe in the existence of such an unconventional city in the length and breadth of this modern continent of ours! To find a Quebec in Europe wouldn't be such a great surprise, though it would certainly be the subject of a vast amount of admiration, and the Mecca of countless tourists, far more than visit it now. What a strange thing custom is and how like a flock of sheep are we inhabitants of the civilized globe! It is the fashion to go to Europe; ergo, to Europe we go, and rush about, and gaze and wonder and spend time and money like water. It isn't specially the fashion to go to Quebec, and so it is only by accident—just a personal, sudden whim that we go at all, and when we get there, we wonder what in the world we have been about all our lives. There is not a city in all Europe better worth the seeing—unless possibly Rome and Venice be excepted—than is this ancient-modern, natural-artificial stronghold—this bit out of the seventeenth century—which is at our very doors, less than twenty-four hours' travel from the Hub of the Universe itself. But there—I'm afraid this sounds like "gush," and you know I never gush; it wouldn't do for one of my—would-be—profession. So to come down to a prosaic description.

I told you in my last of the good road, and the beautiful country, leading from Montreal to Quebec. Of Quebec's hotels I have nothing praiseworthy to say; in fact, it would be hard to say anything very praise-worthy of them. If you are in luck when you go to Quebec, you will get into one of the private boarding-houses, of which there are some very desirable ones, both French and English. As our temporary domicile in Montreal had been French, in Quebec we tried an English one, and found it as distinctively, exquisitely English as the other was French. I could easily have believed myself in a London house. The furniture, table, manners, customs, speech, everything was English, not American. The meals were on the English plan, with lunch at noon and dinner at six, and at the former meal they gave us such honey as I never before tasted out of Switzerland, while the latter meal was topped off with old cheese and butter, in the regular English fashion. Such a funny idea, to eat cheese and butter for the very last thing at dinner. I really begin to believe I feel like dodging anything in the way of a description of Quebec, for I know I can not make you see it by any word-painting. The whole city is built on the side of a very steep hill, that is, on the inland side of it, for the river side is a sharp precipice, an immense granite bluff, partially grass-grown, and crowned by the wonderful massive granite walls of the citadel. Only the very summit of the hill is walled, the streets of the business part of the city being formerly shut off by the great gates. Now only one gate remains, but the yawning apertures in the walls show where they once stood. The walls, however, are intact, and guns are still mounted all along the way, and everything gives a strange appearance of readiness for instant siege which does seem so odd in these days.

The business part of the city is on the side of the hill, but it is still the upper city. The lower city consists of a few narrow streets—but all the streets are narrow in the extreme—running around the base of the hill, those on the river side being reclaimed from the water. The French population controls the lower city, though a very considerable part of the inhabitants of the upper city seem also to be French. You can get an idea of the relative position of the two sections of the city from the fact that there is actually an elevator which runs up and down the perpendicular cliff, to aid and expedite travel about the city.

Seen from below, either from the plain leading to the country, or from the river, the sight is a strange one. From the river the whole effect is formidable indeed, though wondrously beautiful, for besides the wall-crowned precipice, there are all the roofs and steeples glittering in the sunshine like a fabled city of the Arabian Nights. "All is not gold that glitters." In this case it is nothing but tin, but it is tin that, for some unknown reason, does not corrode, and if ever a gorgeously beautiful effect was cheaply gained it was by tin-roofing Quebec. Seen from inland, the city looks as if it consisted of nothing but roofs and chimneys, for the streets rise one above another, so that a very quaint piled-up effect results. I never saw but one such effect before, and that was a most ancient and apparently utterly deserted city somewhere on the road between Rome and Naples, which consisted of a multitude of very tall stone houses clustered thickly all over a very high, steep hill. The streets must have been mere passage-ways; there was apparently not a window sash or pane of glass in the solemn and forbidding place, though those strange black apertures may have been caused by casement windows, which were all open; but there was not one sign of life about the whole place, and the cars passed it at full speed, both going to and returning from Naples, and I have been doubting ever since whether I saw it or dreamed it, or whether it is the veritable enchanted city of the fairy story.

Somehow Quebec reminded me of this dream or reality of a year ago's travel, and now I persistently dream, even in trying to write of Quebec, and can't seem to get down to facts. Yet there are facts there. One fact is the cabmen, and how they will cheat you if you aren't sharper-witted than they. Another fact is Mr. Harris, the Quebec agent of the justly-celebrated Leve & Alden tourist firm, and to whose courtesy and kindness we owe our happy domiciliation in that pleasant English house, as well as our fortunate bargains with the cab-drivers and many other advantages which strangers in a strange city only know how to appreciate. If you go to Quebec just buy some tickets to somewhere of Mr. Harris, and then ask his advice about all sorts of matters that bother you, and you may be certain that he will find you a way out of all your difficulties.

Quebec has but one newspaper, but this is so good a one that the quality of Quebec journalism makes up for its lack of quantity. The Morning Chronicle is a very enterprising, bright and readable sheet, conducted on the most modern principles, though in this ancient, far-away place. For I can not get it out of my mind that Quebec is far away, though, of course, I know it is not.

At all hours the church bells ring and toll. The city is full of churches. Its principal Roman Catholic Cathedral is a basilica. I don't know what a "basilica" is, but this is one. We attended service there one Sunday morning. It has some very fine old paintings. In Montreal and Quebec you go into churches sight-seeing, just as you do in Europe, alternately reading your red-covered guide-book and staring at the pictures and images and shrines.

On Sunday afternoon we had an experience which I would not have missed for a great deal, and which I shall never forget. We went to the chapel of the St. Ursuline Convent to hear the service and singing of the nuns. The chapel is in two parts. We were in the public part, while in the other, hidden from sight, were the nuns. The partition wall had two great arched openings, which were closely barred all across, and on the inner side hung crimson curtains, thus effectually veiling the sanctuary beyond, where the band of devoted sisters chanted the service. A peculiarly soft, sweet, weird music, all singing in the unison of a restrained, prayerful soprano, and the hushed silence of the listening audience—the whole is something to be remembered, not explained.

The next day we visited the Hotel Dieu, a very ancient institution, where the sick are cared for by the nuns of the convent attached. I am almost ashamed to say that we didn't care much about the hospital and the sick people, but we did want to see the nuns, and we could see them in no other way than as nursing the sufferers. And we did see them. The very sweetest, prettiest little creature, still in her twenties, and robed in her soft, white woolen dress, white cotton apron and kerchief, and with the black veil shading the white linen face-bands, acted as our attendant through the wards in the most gracefully courteous and almost childishly innocent fashion. And to think that she can never step outside those walls—never see the world save as the windows give her the beautiful river view—never see a friend or relative—why! I cannot even imagine it! And she, so sweet, so pure, so truly happy—for there was no sham in that face, nor in those of other nuns of all ages whom we saw about. Well, thank God that I can reverence and respect a religion which does not chance to be my own, even though my forefathers were of the strictest of the Puritans.

This letter is outrunning its limits. I must still reserve the account of my journey home for my next.

The theaters are all open here in Boston, and schools and churches in full operation. Dr. Tourjee and his wandering spirits have returned, and the Conservatory of Music has resumed its bee-hive character. The Boston University is just opening its doors, the courts are in session, we have had a "Yellow Tuesday," and altogether it is quite exciting here at the Hub. IDA CLARE.

Ladies' Dress Cheaper.

From the Chicago Tribune.

It's not going to be very expensive to dress well this winter. Ladies can no longer put twenty-five or thirty yards of silk into dresses; they are to be made very plain, mostly embroidered with chenille or beads, and must clear the ground ten or twelve inches, according to the foot of the wearer. At present the great fad of the females is for lovely stockings and nobby shoes. Black silk hose are the favorites, into which are let rows of Chantilly or Maltese lace. At Long Branch ladies do it themselves, buy black silk stockings and insert strips of handsome lace over the instep. In New York a delightful employment and beautiful article of dress is accomplished by knitting what are termed railroad stockings. The most stupid person can knit round and round, and that is all that is required. For the pleasure of my Chicago sisters I append the recipe: There is a silk knitting thread sold here at twenty-nine cents a ball, four of which make a big pair of stockings; but I find the yarn too soft, and prefer a tightly twisted, finer thread, which I purchase of a fringe-maker in large skeins, weighing five ounces. Cast on twenty-eight stitches on the needles and knit away till you have a slender pipe (entirely unsuggestive of a stocking) and about one-half a yard long—not that, if the stocking is not desired an extra length. Then knit round once, dropping every fourth stitch; these dropped stitches will run to the top of the stocking, striping it in lovely open work, and making it instantaneously one-third longer, and wide enough for the largest sort of leg.

After this, the stocking being as many stitches smaller as you have dropped, you knit about three inches at that size, and then off. "What! no heel?" I hear the uninitiated exclaim. No heel. "It's a poor foot that won't shape its own stocking," the old lady said when she knit them this way; but the extreme elasticity of the railroad hose makes a heel unnecessary. They are durable, they are handsome; and they are such jolly things to have round for work that I anticipate my Chicago sisters will thank me for the recipe.

LAUDABLE PUS.

To find out who are the promising young men, ask the tailor.

At Long Branch: "Well, how is he now, doctor?" "Oh, it's another good day." "Good day." "Good day."

Mr. Lamb has been arrested in New York for wearing brass knuckles. It is considered lucky for the lion.

Grain shipments from Indianapolis still continue. Several persons well-corned leave the city on nearly every train.

President Garfield's name has become a houseworld in England. Fortunately it does not begin with an H.

Remarkable things are constantly coming to pass, but who thought that pus would ever become a matter of news.

A seat in the New York Stock Exchange was sold for $30,000 the other day. There must have been a diamond pin in it.

A paragraph going the rounds says that Gen. Grant has begun to dress loudly. Probably a typographical error for talk loudly.

Mr. Conkling, his friends think, has good qualities, but Gov. Sprague doesn't believe that Roscoe has lived up to his blue china.

A lady of Lafayette, Ind., with "great command of language," has just vanquished in debate a minister who spoke against prohibition and female suffrage.

As nobody thus far trying seems able to do away with Guiteau, he might be turned over to Dr. Bliss. The crowds would watch the bulletin boards faithfully.

Nobody should ever complain of the failure of the fruit crop. How much better off we might all have been had the apple crop been a failure in father Adam's day.

Father Lambing, of Pittsburg, declares that henceforth he shall refuse absolution to any parent or guardian who persists in sending children to the public schools.

The Chicago Tribune asserts that "there are some boys who do not smoke." This reads like a bold assertion; but perhaps the Tribune means those boys who are only two weeks old.

Gen. Sheridan hates the Southern people, but he is good to animals. On his recent expedition through the West he would not permit his men to kill more game than was necessary for food.

Should Sergeant Mason be put out of the army, the farming community will have to keep a sharp lookout for the broadsides of their barns. Sometimes a bullet will hit where it is least expected.

Crow Dog, the slayer of Don Juan Spotted Tail, has not escaped attention himself. He carries an arrow point in his left lung, and his right arm has been broken and shattered by bullets to such an extent that it is withered and almost useless.

A Chicago man says: "I ran for office once —when I was young and foolish. I got defeated, and am glad of it. I'd rather be a 'yellow hound' and bay a moon made of green cheese than submit myself again to the moral crucifixion, button-holing, lying, sneaking, double-dealing, back-biting, whispering, conniving, rot-gut swilling, hand-shaking, foul-breathing, make-believe friendship and bare-faced treachery that must befall every man that runs for an office—falsely said to be in 'the gift of the people'—in any great city. In the gift of the devil would hit nearer the mark."

HOUSE-FURNISHING.

The Prevailing Style in Lofty London Circles.

Olive Logan in San Francisco Call.

During his occupation of the official residence in Downing street, Mr. Gladstone is having his private mansion, 73 Harley street, "fixed up" most gorgeously. It is a noble old house, with two wide wings, penetrated by a spacious entrance hall, which he has filled with good statuary and hung with fine pictures. The decorations at present in progress are in the prevailing high art style, and the stained glass over the old-fashioned fanlight window of the entrance door is a really beautiful bit of work. The grand drawing-rooms remain much as they have been for some years back; they are formal saloons for the reception of crowds, and with their long French windows and stately furniture are well adapted to the purpose. Talking of furniture, there is a splendid exhibition of it going on just now in the Agricultural Hall, Islington, an immense building, which is everything by turns and nothing long; first serving as a horse-show, then as a cattle-show, anon as a jousting ground of military tournaments. At present the merchandise offered to inspection is of a kind well adapted to win the attention not only of those "about to marry," but of those who are already bound by Hymen's fetters. For what in all the scope of mortality's common round is of more importance to us in our daily life than the bed we lie upon, the chairs and sofas we sit upon, the table off which we eat, the carpet over which we tread? The rage for having lovely homes pervades all classes of society in the community, where the proportion of those who are willing to endure life at hotels and boarding-houses is infinitesimal, as against the number who insist upon having at least the semblance of a home, if it be nothing more extensive than a couple of rooms and a kitchen; nor must it be forgotten that thousands upon thousands of snug and even handsome little houses are to be had in the London suburbs at yearly rents ranging from $200 to $400. Who pays $500 pays quite a handsome rent, and can almost command his neighborhood; while, as to those who pay $1,000 and $1,200 a year, they, mark you, are "the swells." To furnish all these abodes, hundreds of thousands of hands are working every day, and busy artistic pencils are sketching designs for the artisans to follow.

At the furniture trades' exhibition we see the pick of their handiwork, for the best firms of London upholsterers are exhibiting. A marked feature of the show is the comparative cheapness of the articles offered, while the element of beauty is assiduously studied all the same. Even Jackson & Graham, an old-established firm, which formerly seemed to do business solely on the assumption that every one who could furnish at all could afford to do it regardless of cost, has fallen into line and caters for the moderate purse. Beautiful indeed are some of the dining and bed-room suites of furniture, the scheme of decoration of the entire room being en rapport. A set of painted bed-room furniture is remarkable for its delicate color and fineness of design, both of which are repeated in the wainscoting. Cabinets decorated with medallions; early English sideboards; hanging cupboards with painted tiles; easy-chairs of a wonderful softness, a padded sultanic comfort, which must be felt to be understood, are features of this interesting exhibit. One firm seeking novelty has studied and reproduced an entire dining-room and bed-room set in the style of the Tudor epoch. This imposing furniture is carved in quatrefalls and massive mouldings, a decoration repeated on floors, walls and ceilings. The glass is all beveled. There is a passion for beveled glass just now, and it is introduced into reproductions of fifteenth or seventeenth century work, the solecism being forgiven in the fine effect produced. The Queen Anne, the Chippendale, the Sheraton and the "Adamesque" are the prevailing models. Anything is accepted, however odd, so long as its form and fabric are sound and striking. There are collectors to be found who collect all sorts of strange things, and I have no doubt that George Augustus Sala's move of decorating his entrance hall with a wooden statue from in front of a tobacconist's shop will have a considerable following.

Burnside at Fredericksburg.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Though far from his purpose, Burnside's obstinacy at Sharpsburg changed the destiny of the creator of the Union armies, the man to whom impartial history will accredit a praise that those who least deserve it now wear. A raw, cold night in November, three months later, Burnside was in McClellan's tent, near Warrenton. Gen. Buckingham, an officer of the War Department, was announced. He handed Gen. McClellan a sealed letter. Opening it the General read its contents. Then turning to Burnside, he said in his ordinary tone: "Burnside, you command the army." The latter blushed and stammered his surprise, then roundly declared that he would never consent, that he was not equal to it. Buckingham accompanied him to his quarters and pleaded with him to accept. He showed him that his refusal could not alter the case with McClellan, for the insane hatred of Stanton could be satisfied with nothing less than McClellan's disgrace. He even showed that Stanton counted on McClellan or his friends refusing to abide by the command thus insultingly conveyed and that he (Buckingham) had secret authority to arrest him. Burnside in an evil moment consented. He soon repented his weakness, but, alas, thousands of innocent victims in Northern homes and the fifteen thousand dead and maimed on the frozen banks of the Rappahannock were not comforted by the General's tardy recognition of his own incompetency. General McClellan had matured a plan for turning Lee's right flank and keeping the Army of the Potomac between the rebels and the capital, but so hateful was McClellan to Stanton that Burnside was ordered to dismiss the project and submit a new one. He selected the famous and disastrous heights of Saint Marye. It must be said in justice to him, however, that when he fixed upon this point Lee's army lay in echelon far to the north and west and that if the authorities in Washington had been attending to their business and sent the pontoons as the General ordered, the Union army would have been entrenched on the heights of Fredericksburg long before Lee could have reached them. But, occupied in blackening McClellan's reputation, the War Office paid no heed to the unfortunate commander, and the forever memorable slaughter was ordered, and that, too, in cold blood. Meade protested, Sumner protested, Sedgwick protested, but Burnside refused to be moved. He repeated the command inflexibly. The heights of Saint Marye must be carried; they can be carried; they shall be carried. Three or four times the soldiers of Franklin, Hooker and Hancock stood within bayonet distance of the burning crest, in the very vortex of fire, but it would have required giants, not men, to scale the sharp glacis that protected the thick line of rebels within. It was only on the remonstrance of his bravest generals that Burnside finally, with angry reluctance, gave the order to desist. More than 15,000 men paid the penalty of the War Department's imperious desire that "McClellan's plans" should not be followed. The army remained two days on the south bank of the river, Lee hoping for another attack, but strangely enough making no effort to molest his sadly crippled assailants.

Eugenie's Hand in Two Wars.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

That the Empress Eugenie was largely responsible for the decision taken by her husband when, in 1870, he ordered that march to Berlin which terminated at Sedan, is one of the undisputed facts of recent history. It is, however, much less generally known that this unhappy woman had no small share in the declaration of another war. According to Count Kisselef, who acted as Russian Ambassador at Paris after the Crimean war, it was the Empress who decided the irresolute Napoleon to make war against Russia. The story, as told by Count Kisselef, is given on the authority of the Empress herself, who told him, on the 12th or 13th of May, 1857, that it was she who was responsible for the declaration of war. When the Czar's letter arrived, the curtness of which notoriously embittered Napoleon, the latter handed it to his wife with the remark that it was cold. "No," said she, after reading it, "it is more than cold, 'elle est grossiere.'" The Emperor read the letter again, and said, "C'est vrai, je m' en occuperai." From that moment, said the Empress, war was decided on. Count Kisselef replied: "Then it is your Majesty who has been the cause of the death of 200,000 men, and of the loss of seven or eight milliards of francs!" "Yes," she answered, "indirectly, and I do not repent of it. Such perturbations are sometimes necessary in the existence of peoples. It was necessary for France to take her rightful place in Europe. She has done this by means of the alliance with England, and by that alliance she will maintain her influence at home and abroad."

Curious Cases of Bigamy.

From the New York Sun.

On the 5th inst. it was reported at the Police Central Office that Mary Louisa Baillie, aged 17, of 81 Lewis street, and Sarah Love, aged 18, of 123 Avenue D, had disappeared two days before. The case was given to Detective John McNamara, and his investigation has revealed two curious cases of bigamy. It appears that their disappearance was due to their connection with two married men—Thomas McLoughlin, aged 22, of 35 Lewis street, and Louis Tischler, aged 21, of 37 Lewis street. On July 17 the four started out together. Tischler knew the Rev. J. F. Busche, of 108 Rivington street, and had been married by Busche to Jane McCarty, January 21, 1880, and the party went there first. Mr. Busche married McLoughlin to Mary Baillie, the other couple acting as witnesses. The Rev. D. W. Couch, of 101 Henry street, had married McLoughlin to Mary E. Maloney in October, 1879, and there the party went to have the ceremony performed for Tischler and Sarah Love. Mary Baillie put herself down as Mrs. Mary McLoughlin in signing as a witness her friend's marriage certificate.

The girls were fully aware that they were marrying men already married, and, in fact, were acquainted with the men's wives. Their plan was to run away to Boston, and live there, but at the time of their marriage they had not enough money to do so. The girls worked together in a factory, earning $7 a week apiece. McLoughlin earned $10 a week as a galvanizer. The girls lived at home, and went about their work as usual, giving their earnings to McLoughlin, who was to save up enough to take the whole party away. Instead of arranging to leave the city McLoughlin hired two rooms at 31 Chrystie street, and on the 3d inst. they moved in. Last Thursday night Detective McNamara got a clue to their whereabouts, and found the place on Friday morning. Only the girls were at home, and he took them into custody. At 5 o'clock on Monday afternoon he arrested McLoughlin at his legal wife's house. Tischler is known to have left the city. McLoughlin will be arraigned in the Essex Market Police Court this morning on the charge of bigamy. His wife refused to appear, but the two girls will testify. They are said to have been girls of good reputation and modest demeanor, and there was nothing in their behavior up to the time they left home that led their families to suspect that anything was wrong.

A Borrowing Family.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A family from down in Indiana moved into a house on Second avenue last week, and before night had borrowed tea, sugar, eggs, milk and kerosene from as many different neighbors. After three or four days the new family ceased to borrow promiscuously, and settled down on one particular neighbor. At an early hour in the morning a small boy appeared and said: "Say, we are out of tacks and want to put down our carpet. Ma wants to know if she can borrow a few?" A hunt was made and the request granted, but in ten minutes the boy returned and said, "Say, we've mislaid our tack hammer, and ma wants to borrow yours." He got it, and this time it was twenty minutes before he returned and said: "Say, ma's pulled all her teeth out pulling on that carpet. She wants to know if you won't lend her one of your boys." One of the boys was sent over, but it was an obstinate carpet, and back came the messenger with: "Say, ain't your husband home?" "Yes, what do you want?" "Well, ma's mislaid her husband somewhere, and she wants to borrow yours to pull one end of that infernal carpet through two doors and across a hall." The line had to be fixed somewhere, and it was fixed here.

Skin Grafting.

Newburg, N. Y., Special to Cincinnati Gazette.

Dr. John Deys, Health Officer of this city, has successfully performed the operation of skin grafting upon Mary Foster, aged 10 years. Several months ago she accidentally scalded herself. Her body was badly burned, particularly the right arm, the skin of which, from the shoulder to the tips of the fingers, peeled off. The arm was slow to heal, and caused intense pain, while the discharge from it was very weakening. On the 1st of May Dr. Deys decided to perform the skin grafting operation. Pieces of skin were taken from the arms of four or five young men and were placed on the scalded arms. About three-fourths of the grafts took root and slowly grew till they covered the intervening space, and joining together afforded that protection which the scalded arm needed. The arm was nearly healed in six weeks, and it is now pronounced well. There is not a scar in its whole length, and the skin is as soft and smooth as any part of the child's body.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

BY JOSEPH PULITZER.

[Entered at the Post-Office at St. Louis, Mo., as second-class mail matter.]

The POST-DISPATCH has a LARGER CITY CIRCULATION, on each day of publication, than ANY OTHER PAPER published in St. Louis. Advertisers are at all times welcome to call and satisfy themselves of the strict accuracy of this claim.

Statement of Circulation.

ST. LOUIS, September 17, 1881.

I solemnly swear that the following is a true and correct statement of the actual bona fide circulation of the DAILY POST-DISPATCH for the days mentioned:

Saturday, September 10	18,028
Monday, September 12	17,420
Tuesday, September 13	17,728
Wednesday, September 14	17,724
Thursday, September 15	17,624
Friday, September 16	17,624
Total, six days	106,148

Average daily circulation, 17,691 copies.

JOHN M. MCGUFFIN,
Business Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me the day and year above written.

(Seal.) I. G. KAPPNER,
Notary Public City of St. Louis.
Commission expires July 7, 1885.

THE condition of President GARFIELD is most alarming again. About noon to-day he had another rigor, lasting a half hour. His pulse ran up to 137, and great prostration must have followed. The physicians are trying the experiment of building up his depleted system by using fresh blood in the form of enemata. All reports from Elberon are of the most discouraging character, and the death of the sufferer seems once more to be but a question of hours.

LUDLOW, the Prohibition candidate in Ohio, has the press on his side—the cider-press.

THE opinions and views of the Kansas City Journal are regulated, we presume, exclusively by advertising patronage.

THE Greenback cyclone in Missouri has spent its fury for this year. The people are gathering their crops, and though the crops are small they feel easier.

THE circulation of the POST-DISPATCH continues to expand. The public in this part of the country appreciate a genuine article of journalistic goods.

BUSINESS in St. Louis is looking up. The coming of autumn finds our merchants and manufacturers full of hope and energy and the streets tell the story of the general activity out of which prosperity comes.

PROPERTY holders on the principal streets are generally willing to pay for granite block paving, in view of the poverty of the city. They are tired of mud and chuckholes and the semi-annual rippings-up to which our rotten wood thoroughfares are subjected.

OUR patrons in North St. Louis complain very bitterly about the quality of the gas furnished by the Laclede Gas Company. The pleasing task of reading the POST-DISPATCH extends far into the night, and we must insist on having that end of the city well illuminated.

THERE is internal trouble in the School Board, as will be seen by our local columns to-day. It can all be traced back to the baneful influence of the text-book canvasser. We may yet lose a valuable citizen or two in the effort to determine whether the publisher of MCGUFFEY'S or APPLETON'S Readers shall derive a profit of eighty per cent off the juveniles of St. Louis.

A CRAZY man from California called at the Executive Mansion in Jefferson City yesterday and represented himself as GOV. CRITTENDEN'S son-in-law. He was ornamented with two revolvers and his intention was evidently to unite the distracted Democratic party of the State by removing the Governor. The perils that environ great men nowadays are frightful to contemplate.

DR. BLISS is reported in a special telegram to a morning paper to have said that the President "has occasional hallucinations." The Doctor might have added that if there is any one thing he knows a little more about than another it is hallucinations. He has a semi-occasional waking dream himself in which he imagines that if surgical skill fails, his bulletins may be successful in pulling the President through.

THE editor of the Warrensburg Journal is very proud of the address delivered at the opening of the People's Theater in this city by F. C. FARR, the Governor's private secretary. Those of our citizens who were asphyxiated by that classic lecture do not swell with pride at the mere mention of it. In fact, the opinion prevails among the Knights of St. Patrick that the Governor could have done as poorly himself.

AS a part of the short-sighted policy of the managers of the St. Louis Fair Association, it may be mentioned that they have offered no premiums for cotton this year, though the product is profitably raised in South Missouri, and Arkansas and Texas are both tributary to our city. The cotton trade of St. Louis is worth $20,000,000, and the men who are bringing this business to our market are entitled to as much encouragement as the man who raises a big hog or a phenomenal cabbage.

GUITEAU has been quivering with fear in his cell ever since Sergeant MASON'S bullet whistled uncomfortably near one of his ears. He is apprehensive of another attempt on his life, and with a view to making his surroundings as safe as possible the authorities have caused his apartment to be bricked up all around. This shows a great deal of consideration on the part of GUITEAU'S jailers. He couldn't possibly be better taken care of even if he were domiciliated in "Murderers' Row" in our great caravansary for criminals, with three good square meals a day and the prospect of a lengthy stretch of leisure and pleasure before him.

NOW, by St. Paul, our sympathies begin to go out to ex-Minister CHRISTIANCY. In addition to being burdened with a red-haired wife of bad repute and a divorce suit, he has been challenged by a fiery brother-in-law to come over into Virginia and fight a duel. And on top of all this thieves broke into his room in a Washington hotel yesterday and stole $6,000 worth of jewels which were in his custody. If this sort of thing keeps on CHRISTIANCY will become a sort of National JEREMIAH.

THE old war between Cincinnati and Louisville has broken out with renewed malignancy. A tourist navigating the river Nile would probably be astonished to hear that a rivalry was still going on between the venerable cities of Memphis and Thebes and the general public will probably be surprised that the debilitated cities of Cincinnati and Louisville still regard each other with rankling jealousy. Recently Louisville started an Exposition and invited all the South to come up and buy something. Special rates were offered to merchants by the railways penetrating the South. As soon as the city filled up with brethren Cincinnati slipped down and offered to give them a cheap-rate ride to her gates. Many of the small dealers embraced the opportunity to extend their business acquaintance and the Louisville press now gnashes its teeth and swears that the common rules of intermunicipal courtesy have been brutally violated. We are waiting to see what they are going to do about it.

NOTWITHSTANDING the ruling of the Supreme Court in regard to murders committed under "mental excitement," we do not believe Mr. L. U. REAVIS will be justified by a jury in killing a POST-DISPATCH editor. He has written several letters setting forth a determination to imbrue his hands in blood, and though he may conceive that he has great provocation, such premeditation and malice aforethought will tend to deprive him of the immunity which most murderers enjoy. Mr. REAVIS is a public character. He is the author of books, essays and schemes of great national importance. His name appears with alarming frequency appended to cards in the newspapers. We have great respect for his sensitiveness, but capital-moving is a very serious business and we propose to defend, even at the point of the sword, our right to criticise the public acts of public men. If Mr. REAVIS is anxious to pass for a private citizen it will be necessary for him to dispense with some of his great ideas and a small portion of his obtrusiveness.

As to Varioloid.

NOKOMIS, ILL., September 16, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Will you please tell me through the columns of your paper whether a person having the varioloid when very young (age 2 years) will ever take the small-pox afterwards.

Yours, etc., G. O.

[A case of varioloid, at any time, is a good protection against small-pox, but in this instance we would advise immediate vaccination. People have even been known to have the small-pox a second time.—ED. P.-D.]

The Best Encyclopædia.

ST. LOUIS, September 15.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Will you please inform through your valuable paper which is the best and most extensive Encyclopædia now published.

O. C. MEYER, M. D.

[The Encyclopædia Britannica is the standard work of the world. For American use Appletons' is highly recommended.—ED. P.-D.]

The Modoc Victim.

ST. LOUIS, September 17, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please inform a subscriber of the name of the U. S. General who was massacred by Capt. Jack and the Modoc Indians, and settle a dispute as to the name. G.

[The officer who was treacherously shot by Capt. Jack on the 11th of April, 1873, was Gen. E. R. S. Canby, of Kentucky.—ED P.-D.]

Cruel in the Extreme.

From the Louisiana (Mo.) Journal.

A gentleman traveling in this State for a Boston firm says that when his house heard of the Blue Cut train robbery they telegraphed him to quit Missouri at once. It is hard enough to stand the odium cast upon our State by reason of the robbery, but to be deprived of the society of the average Boston drummer is a calamity greater than we are prepared for.

The Diseased Planets.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Warner, of Rochester, who suspects that the heavenly bodies are affected with kidney disease, has offered a prize of $200 for the best essay on comets. The essays are to be descriptive and all technical terms are to be penned up in brackets. This scheme looks like it would work.

Another Slander.

From the Chicago Tribune.

A slight shock of earthquake is reported to have been felt at Greenwich, New Brunswick. When St. Louis girls away from home are going to play skip-the-rope they should notify the community, and not have reports of earthquake shocks telegraphed all over the country.

The Hospital Lecture Course.

After considering various propositions for the accommodation of the medical colleges at the City Hospital, the members of the Board of Health will probably settle upon a schedule of hours for lectures and name the lecturers next week. The following is under consideration, with strong probabilities of being decided upon:

Mondays—From 3 p. m. to 5 p. m. Lecturers—Drs. Robinson and Lankford.
Tuesdays—Same hours. Drs. Bauer and King.
Wednesdays—Same hours. Drs. Hodgen and Smith.
Thursdays—Reserved for general visitors as usual.
Fridays—Same hours. Drs. Pitzer and Parsons.
Saturdays—Reserved for cleaning up.

THE BATTLE OF THE BOOKS.

The School Board to Be Again Torn Open With Charges of Bribery.

Principal Caldwell Takes an Innings and Does Some Hard Batting.

The Inside History of the Recent Trouble in the Board.

For nearly two years past there has been constant trouble in the St. Louis School Board. Bickerings and jealousies made the meetings partake largely of the character of Donnybrook fairs. But the gentlemen did not confine themselves long to mere idle recrimination. As time went on the discussions became more acrid, and to-day more than one-third of the members of the board are not on speaking terms with each other, while gentle allegations of perjury, corruption, lying, lechery, fraud and dishonesty are the best things they can find to say of each other.

When Prof. Wm. T. Harris, the father of the St. Louis public school system, threw up the superintendency of the schools in disgust, people generally wondered what was the matter, and, despite the assurance that he was seeking literary leisure for the balance of his days, those on the inside knew that he had been forced out by the school-book question. The theory that the School Board was instituted for the proper control of and maintenance of the public schools is a popular delusion. The board has existed for years past for the purpose of supplying the growing youth of the city with school books at a round profit to the manufacturer. When Mr. Harris left, the two opposing forces, Appletons and McGuffey's Readers, were marshaled against each other. Each of them picked out a candidate for Superintendent, and McGuffey gave Appleton a very black eye indeed when Mr. Long was called to the vacant slippers of Mr. Harris instead of Mr. Caldwell, the apostle of Appleton. Although Appleton was scratched, he was not killed by any manner of means, and the election had hardly ended when the fight began again. The weapons which the rival book publishers used against each other were charges of the direst description. The records of both the candidates for Superintendent were searched as with a fine-tooth comb, and one of them was found to have received his education at the unrequited expense of an impoverished benefactor, while the other gentleman had been raised on less than eighteen separate and distinct kinds of Hades in the town of Edina, Mo. The members of the board not being as chaste as ice, nor as pure as snow, did not entirely escape calumny either. It was alleged that one industrious member got a peculiarly soft thing on a job of painting, while the medical end of the board were run to death by the different kinds of diseases which the enterprising book agents managed to catch. Of course no sane man would believe that all this row and bother could be kept up so long without some of the sinews of war being stretched in the campaign. Accordingly it was no surprise to learn that Dr. Holland charged Mr. Caldwell with bribery. The investigation mill was not put to grinding, because if somebody had been wickedly bribing, somebody else had just as wickedly been bribed. The machinery itself got out of order, because Appleton and McGuffey very nearly balanced in the board, and a bribery investigation once begun would probably damage one side just as much as the other, and hence where would be the use of it? At the last meeting of the board it is whispered that one gentleman's coat tails were nearly pulled off in the process of holding him down from a general attack on Caldwell, because it was understood that Caldwell's friends were just as well prepared with affidavits as the McGuffey gang. At the next meeting the fight must come. Painful as it will be to all of those interested in the sacred cause of the school book trade, it cannot be longer staved off. Mr. Michael Foerstel, one of the members of the Board, a butcher at Union Market, has determined to read a communication from Mr. Caldwell, demanding an investigation of all the charges against him, and also to throw the following bombshell affidavit into the ranks of the McGuffeyites:

State of Missouri, City of St. Louis—ss.

W. R. Wales, being duly sworn, testifies that on the evening of July 10, 1881, I was sitting near the closed window shutters of a window in the parlor of Mr. A. F. Caldwell's residence at 1401 Chestnut, at which time I heard a gentleman, whose name I learned was Thomas Farrelly, propose to said Caldwell that if he, the said Caldwell, would pay to him, the said Farrelly, the sum of $150, he, Farrelly, would drop all opposition to said Caldwell on the Edina and other questions and secure to the said Caldwell the lasting friendship of School Director Peebles. I heard the said Caldwell reply, "No, sir; I spurn such an offer, and do not solicit such help."

W. R. WALES.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 15th day of August, 1881.

Notary Public, City of St. Louis.
Commission expires June 27, 1885.

MR. FARRELLY INTERVIEWED.

Mr. Thomas Farrelly was seen at his office. He did not know anything about Wales' affidavit or about Wales himself, having never heard of or seen the man. When acquainted with the contents of the affidavit Mr. Farrelly said there was not a grain of truth in the allegations, and then told his side of the story.

"Mr. Caldwell," he said, "was here in my office one day in April, before the election of Superintendent, and while sitting on that piece of zinc," indicating the portion before the fire-place, "made me the offer which I have already explained in a public statement printed in the POST-DISPATCH some weeks ago. He offered me $150 for my influence in supporting him for the position of Superintendent before the board. He said nothing about obtaining the influence of any particular member of the Teachers' Committee, but I understood all his conversation to indicate that he wanted to win over Mr. Peebles. I told him at the time that I could not entertain his proposition and that it was unworthy of an honest man to make such a proposition. I told him that his house and lot on the corner of Pine and Compton avenue couldn't induce me to entertain any such thought. I heard no more from him until after the election in May. Then somebody told me Caldwell was going around lying about and vilifying me. I went to Mr. Peebles' office one day and heard the same story from him. I then told Peebles all that had passed between me and Caldwell, and added that no honest man knowing his record could afford to vote to sustain Caldwell in his position in the Stoddard School. Peebles asked me if I could back up my assertions in regard to Caldwell, and I answered that I could and would. About the 25th of June, or somewhere along that time, Peebles called at my office and asked me if he might use my name in connection with the statement I had given him. I told Peebles that when my name was to be used I wanted to use it myself. He then arranged to bring myself and Caldwell together in a certain place at an appointed time, but he did not make his appearance. Peebles a day or so afterwards told me he had acquainted Caldwell with the author of the statement—had given him my name, and Caldwell had denied the allegations. I said that if Caldwell had made any denial of my story he simply lied. About the 1st of July I went to Little Rock, and on the 5th or 6th of July, after my return, I received a message from a prominent Second street merchant saying he wished to see and talk with me. When I went to this gentleman's office he had gone home. His son explained the father's business with me. He told me that Caldwell, accompanied by a prominent attorney, had called on his father and requested him to solicit my aid in keeping Caldwell in his position. I then and there stated that I could and would do no such thing. I also made up my mind right then to call upon Caldwell and notify him that I wanted him to keep his mouth shut."

"What did you want him to keep his mouth shut about?"

"He had been talking a great deal about me," Mr. Farrelly continued, "bothering my friends and myself with his solicitations for help, and I went to notify him that I had made my statement regarding our transactions and could have nothing more to do with him. I called at Mr. Caldwell's house that evening—I think it was the 7th or 8th of July—certainly not after that. I met Caldwell at the door and we had our conversation on the pavement. I told him he had been talking about me, and I wanted it stopped. I said I was responsible, financially and personally, for the statement I had made to Peebles, and he could take it any way he wanted. He pulled out a lot of affidavits—that's what he called them—and, waving them over his head, said he could get away with all the affidavits we could get against him. I told him I had made no affidavit, and that a stock of affidavits as high as a house could not detract from the truth of my statement. I dared him to make an affidavit himself contradicting my assertion, and said he could not possibly be base enough to perjure himself in doing so.

"You can see that all these circumstances of my story are properly linked. I had done with Mr. Caldwell long before the 10th of July. My statements against him were made in June, and it is not at all likely that I would make such an offer as he says I have made at such a late date as the 10th of July and in the face of such circumstances as those I have detailed. If you care to come with me to Mr. Peebles' office I will show you correspondence of his which will corroborate everything I say."

"You don't think this man Wales is telling the truth?" the reporter asked.

"No. If Caldwell is getting up any such affidavits as these, he is simply getting people to perjure themselves."

"I tell you" Mr. Farrelly continued, "Caldwell had better look out or somebody will get into trouble."

MR. PEEBLES.

Mr. Farrelly and the reporter found Mr. Peebles at the Law Library. Peebles had left the copies of his letters to Caldwell at home. He made a statement, however, which fitted exactly to that made by Mr. Farrelly and said he did not desire to take sides in the present controversy but merely to tell the truth about it as he knew it.

Vaccination Day.

Health Commissioner Francis has laid before the Mayor a plan for free vaccination. He proposes to have a physician at the Soulard Street Police Station, and one at the Carr Street Station all day Saturday to vaccinate, free of charge, all who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity. The Commissioner wrote to Chief Kennett asking him if there would be any objection to this plan, and received reply offering co-operation. If Mr. Ewing approves the Commissioner's suggestion next Saturday will find Dr. O'Brien at the up-town station and Dr. Kaufmann down town prepared to puncture arms and apply the points.

Fired by a Spark.

A small-sized prairie fire, caused by a spark from a Missouri Pacific passenger train about 9:30 last night, was in progress at the corner of Davis street and New Manchester road, when Officers Dowd and Hurley extinguished the flames. A spark from the engine set fire to the weeds and did $5 damages to the fences.

The artist has treated the subject in an entirely new and original manner. M. Jourdan gained the Paris medals of 1864, '66, '69, hors concours.

GAGGED AND BOUND.

A German Woman Gives a Tramp a Breakfast,

Then the Ruffian Attacks Her and Robs the House.

The German people living in the neighborhood of Seventeenth and Buchanan streets had a veritable sensation this morning, and the women have done nothing but stand around in groups and talk about it.

At 7:30 this morning an old man, looking like a tramp, entered the house of August Gruen, a hod-carrier, 3213 North Seventeenth street. Gruen was away at work and his wife was alone in the house. "Give me something to eat," said the stranger. "I'm hungry." Mrs. Gruen, a charitable, matronly old lady of about forty years asked him into the back room where the breakfast table was set. A cup of coffee was poured out, and the visitor invited to make himself at home. He did so. He ate leisurely and drank his coffee, after which he got up from the table, looked around the room, approached Mrs. Gruen and said:

"Look here, old lady, I want some money."

"I have no money," was the answer.

"I know a d—n sight better; I tell you I want money."

"I have none," said Mrs. Gruen. "Please go away." The lady began to edge towards the back door, but the scoundrel was too much for her. He leaped upon her, grasped her by the throat, threw her down upon the bed in one corner of the room and then choked her until she became black in the face and almost insensible. So quick had the villain been in his actions that, although the little cottage is surrounded by houses on each side, the unfortunate woman was unable to scream loud enough to atract attention. When the man had choked Mrs. Gruen until she was almost insensible, he reached for a towel lying on the table near by, folded it into a gag, forced it into the woman's mouth and tied the ends back of her head. He then tied her hands securely together, after stretching them behind her neck, and made the other end of the cord fast around the bed post. His victim was thus at his mercy. She had recovered consciousness, but she was powerless to shout or make any demonstration. Her persecutor stood over her, she says, with a terrible glare in his eyes. What he was meditating can easily be imagined. A slight noise outside caused him to start and he went over to the window and peered out. When he came back he seemed to have remembered that it was not policy to loiter. He broke open the wardrobe standing in the room, and took from it $20, all the money it contained. After a further search, which yielded nothing, he disappeared by the back door, leaving Mrs. Gruen in her helpless condition. She lay there for half an hour, unable to relieve herself. At the end of that time, Mrs. Aders, a cooper's wife, who lives across the way, came over for a friendly call, and found Mrs. Gruen still tied, her head hanging on the bed in such a way that the pressure on the neck combined with the gag almost choked her. She had struggled to release herself but had only succeeded in causing the cords to cut into her wrists and arms. She was at once released, but was too weak and nervous to get up. Officer Hotfelder, who lives near, was sent for, and her husband, a hod carrier, soon put in an appearance. The news soon spread around, and when the POST-DISPATCH representative reached the place nearly 200 people were gathered about Gruen's residence. Many of the women in the neighborhood had sent for their husbands, under the impression that a raid of some kind was to be made in the vicinity. Mrs. Gruen was found weak and excited. She described the man as looking like a tramp. He was 40 years of age, 5 feet 6 inches in height, heavy set, with dark hair, moustache and chin whiskers, dark coat and pants and an old gray hat. While the reporter was talking to her Officer Hotfelder brought in a man whom he had arrested on suspicion, but the old lady threw up her hands and said, "nein! nein!" meaning that it was not the right person. The shock to her nervous system will be likely to injure her greatly. The police of the Fourth District are hunting for the scoundrel with all diligence. Captain Daly said that he could hardly believe that any such thing could occur in such a populous neighborhood at that hour. It was very strange. He was on his way to the house to make an investigation in person.

THE LACLEDE HOTEL.

Improvements Made Recently That Raise the Standard of the House.

The Laclede Hotel is at last what its patrons and friends have long desired to see it, a really first-class hotel, with every modern convenience and luxury at rates that are so moderate as to make them popular with the traveling public. J. L. Griswold and W. F. Sperry became the owners of the Laclede about three months ago, and it is under their personal direction and at their own expense the many improvements have been made. Mr. Griswold is well known as one of the original lessees of the Lindell, and his reputation and popularity as a hotelman have grown rapidly during the past seven years of his connection with this great caravansary. Mr. Sperry was for twelve years connected with the Planters' House, and has recently conducted the Alvord House, one of the best hotels in Denver, Col. Both gentlemen have been entirely successful in catering to the demands of hotel patrons, and now that they propose to devote their whole time and personal attention to the management of the Laclede it is safe to predict that they will soon lift their new house to a level, both in the extent of its business and the favor of the public, with the finest and largest establishment in the city.

The improvements that have been made in the Laclede since Messrs. Griswold & Sperry came into possession of it are so numerous that the house has assumed an entirely new aspect. Indeed, it is a wholly new establishment in everything but its exterior. The parlors and entire lower portion of the hotel have been refinished in elegant style, the latest novelties in furniture being taken advantage of and recent changes in the form and upholstering of articles adopted; so that the Laclede is not only comfortably fitted up but is also in the fashion. The dining room, which extends all the way across the width of the house, has also been refurnished and the improvements have extended even to the kitchen, whose interior has been remodeled, while all its arrangements are of the very best pattern and its utensils new and bright throughout. The three hundred rooms with accommodations for fully 500 guests, without at all crowding the capacity of the house, have been thoroughly cleansed, carpeted and refurnished. The rotunda with the fresh frescoing and the many changes that have been effected in its appearance presents a really charming picture to tee eye and invites the sojourn of the traveler who gets a glimpse at it. Electric lights blaze in all the public portions of the hotel, flooding them with daylight, and steam heating apparatus artistically concealed by tablets of white marble will make the temperature pleasant in winter, while the latest methods of ventilating have been employed in keeping its atmosphere pure and healthy.

The sanitary condition of the hotel has received special attention from its new proprietor. It has been wholly freed from poisonous gases and unpleasant odors. Rats and vermin have been banished forever from the premises by the new appliances that are used in the plumbing and sewerage. The old and leaky sewer-pipes have been removed and replaced by well jointed eight-inch pipes, water and gas tight, which are laid four feet beneath the cellar floor. Improved traps to prevent the backward flow of noxious gases and sewage have been placed at proper intervals, and ten large pipes running through the walls of the building to a height of six feet above the roof carry off any odors that may possibly be created in the sewer. Portable wash-stands have been substituted for the old stationary ones with sewer connections, which were great sources of gaseous annoyance in the old house. Mr. Jennings' patent has been substituted everywhere in the closet system for the old-fashioned flat pans. The plumbing throughout the house is new and of the most approved character. The circulatory system in use in the Southern Hotel, which leaves no dead ends to any of the pipes, has been adopted, and thus the stagnation of fluids at any point is impossible. Scraps of tin thrown around the water and sewer pipes and a plentiful sprinkling of Paris green are calculated to keep rats and vermin from between the walls and floors of the house.

The Laclede is now pronounced by gentlemen who have been in the first hotels in the country to be one of the best hotel establishments west of New York.

FORENOON SESSION.

Flour—Receipts [illegible] brls. Quiet and easy, with tendency toward lower prices. We quote: Fancy $7 [illegible]; choice $7 00@7 15; family $6 [illegible]; xxx $6 40@6 70; xx $5 90@6 05; x $5 55@5 [illegible]; superfine $5 20@5 40; fine $4 50@5 00; extra fancy and patents held higher.

Wheat—Receipts [illegible] sks, 47,250 bu; lower. The speculative grade weak and slow, with free sellers and millers the only buyers of cash, while futures were almost demoralized; No. 3 red taken lightly for shipment and milling; other grades comparatively well sustained, No. 4 selling to shippers and Mediterranean for milling. No. 2 red sold at $1 43¾@1 43¼ cash; $1 46@1 44½ October; $1 49@1 48¼ November; $1 52@1 51¼ December; $1 44@1 43¾ year; No. 3 red at $1 31¼@1 31¼ this, $1 32 E. side; No. 4 at $1 21 in St. L., $1 25 E. side, $1 24½ C.; rejected E. side at $1 13 and in St. L. at $1 11; No. 2 Mediterranean at $1 41@1 42½; No. 3 do at $1 32@1 31¾ this, $1 31 E. side; No. 2 spring salable at $1 31 cash, $1 31½ October, $1 33 November.

Corn—Receipts 65,500 bu. Unsettled; No. 2 mixed opened better, but subsequently declined and was weak for cash and futures, former selling mainly to speculators; white-mixed dull and lower, order buyers taking No. 2 and millers rejected do; rejected firm and in shipping demand. No. 2 mixed sold at 64⅛@63⅝ cash, closing at 64; September at 64⅛@64; October at 65½@66 to 65½; November at 68⅛ to 67½; December at 69 to 69¼; year at 64⅛@63⅝@64; May at 76@75½. No. 2 white-mixed at 74⅛@[illegible] in E. cash; 75½ October; bids of 74⅛ for September, 76½ November, 84⅛ May. Rejected do sold at 63 in St. L. Rejected at 61½@62 this and 62 E. side.

Oats—Receipts 636 sks, 28,800 bu. Declined and was weak under free offerings to sell and little demand to meet. Order and feeding dealers bought lightly and speculators took No. 2 at bottom rates. Sales of No. 2 at 43@42½ cash, 45⅛@45 to 45 November, 43@42½ year, bids of 41⅛ September, 43½ October, 46½ December, 51 May; rejected bid at 41 E. side, 41½ in St. L.; for No. 2 white in St. L. 42⅛ bid.

Rye—Receipts 136 sks, 4,000 bu. Stiffer and higher, as the demand was steady and good. No. 2 sold at $1 07⅛@1 07½ cash, $1 10 October; bids of $1 07½ for September, $1 12 for November, $1 07½ for year; $1 05½ for rejected.

Millfeed—Steady and in active demand. Sales of bran f. o. b. E. track at 85@87½ for bulk, 98 for sacked; latter at mill worth 95.

Hay—Receipts 342 tons; weak and lower, with sellers anxious to close out, and buyers slow to meet them, save at sharp declines. Sales, this side, prairie $10 75, mixed $14, threshed $12 50@13 00, prime timothy $18 00@19 00, choice $20 00@21 00.

Provisions—A firmer and better tone manifest, though there was no appreciable change in values, and movement only fair. Standard mess pork sold at $19 75 del. Prime steam lard nominal at about 12.10@15. Loose dry salt shoulders still quotable at 7.90, long clear at 10.60, clear ribs at 10.70, short clear at 11.05; boxed long clear sold at 10⅝, clear ribs at 10¾, short clear at 11¼. CATTLE—The supply was small and consisted mainly of grass Texans and a few car loads of butchers' stuff, which found ready disposal at strong prices. Local speculators and the canners were the leading operators. Good shipping steers were wanted, but none offered. Scalawag stuff dull. The prospects for the coming week are quite flattering for desirable grades, and, no matter if the run be large, all will find call. Perhaps prices on immatured stock will be a little lower, but will still be relatively high. Stock and feeding steers slow and unchanged. Milch cows with calves in moderate supply. Ruling quotations steady.

AMUSEMENTS.

Next Week's Attractions at the Theaters.

Barnum's Greatest Show on Earth—Musical and Theatrical Gossip.

The change in the weather was beneficial to the theaters, and a liberal patronage has been bestowed upon all worthy entertainments. At the People's the Lingards have played a most successful engagement. Their last performance takes place this evening, when "The Lion and the Mouse" will be given. At Pope's the Irish drama of "Eviction" was a failure. Milton Nobles at the Grand Opera-house played to good business. To-night he will present for the last time here his new play of "Interviews; or, Bright Bohemia." Herrmann, the magician, was fairly patronized at the Olympic. His engagement closes this evening.

To-morrow evening at the Grand Opera-house Wm. C. Mitchell's Pleasure Party will appear in "Our Goblins." Mr. William Gill and his wife, Miss Eleanor Deering, are included in the excellent company.

At Pope's the Big Four Minstrels are underlined for to-morrow night, and Ethiopian minstrelsy will prevail for one week.

Barry and Fay's "Muldoom Picnic Party" are announced for to-morrow evening at the People's. This is a most excellent variety company.

Gus Williams in his new play, "Wanted, a Carpenter," appears at the Olympic to-morrow evening. The authors of the piece are Messrs. Langan and Calhoun, both New York journalists of reputation. Williams has made quite a success in it.

Barnum's Circus will be here next week. The greatest show on earth will begin its entertainments on Monday.

NOTES.

Judge Tourgee and Steele Mackaye's dramatic vers[illegible] of "A [illegible]" will be produced in the Arch Street Theater, Philadelphia, October 24.

It is stated that Mrs. Sothern's share in the deceased actor's American property amounts to $30,000. It [illegible] understood that the proposed [illegible] Mr. Sothern's will has been abandoned.

"Sedgemoor," W. G. and F. C. Wills' new "historical play," founded on episodes in the career of the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth, produced at Sadler's Wells Theater on August 20, is a dire failure, if the London critics are to be believed.

John McCullough began his first engagement, since his return from Europe, in St. Paul last Monday night, playing "Virginius" to a good house. J. Yorke Stevens, an English actor, made his American debut as a member of Mr. McCullough's company.

Pauline Lucca has passed the summer in Ichl and returns to Vienna next month for the season at the Imperial Opera. She intends to create three new roles. In Leschetizki's new opera, "The First Wrinkle," in Gluck's "Iphigenia in Tauris" and in the "Taming of the Shrew," by Goetz.

During her European tournee, beginning next month, Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt will give six performances at the Lyceo Theater, Barcelona, at 7,000 francs per night; ten at the Ring Theater, Vienna, for 10,000 francs a night, and the same number at the Costanzi Theater, Rome. Her company will include twenty-nine persons.

Six "combinations" formed for traveling have come to grief and been disbanded since the opening of the season: Lyster's "Loyal Till Death," Mrs. Everett's "Ruth, an American Wife," J. W. Collier's "Coney Island," Jarrett and Rowe's "Smiff," Sweet's "Our College Boys; or, Medical Students on a Lark," and the Addie Rogers Company.

Says a correspondent writing of the forthcoming production of "Patience" by the D'Oyly Carte Company: "Miss Roache, who plays the æsthetic Lady Jane, weighs in the neighborhood of 300 pounds, and has a voice of power in proportion. Imagine this big jump of a woman sitting by the margin of a lake, in the sad moonlight, accompanying herself on a violoncello."

Robson and Crane opened their season at Detroit last Monday night, producing "Twelfth Night." Stuart Robson as Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and W. H. Crane as Sir Toby Belch, were highly successful; the comedy was elegantly mounted and costumed, and the performance was a "hit," according to the local press. The comedians open Haverly's new theater in Chicago, on Monday night, with the same play.

Mr. Robert Goldbeck will within a very few days open a new private musical college. He has leased for a number of years a large and elegant house which he is furnishing throughout beautifully and without stint of expense, Able teachers will assist Mr. Goldbeck in the various departments, while he himself, personally, will continue to teach instrumental, vocal and harmony classes. By Tuesday or Wednesday full particulars will be given of date of opening, location, etc., of the new musical institute.

The London Figaro states that "Mr. Henry Jarrett has, on behalf of Mme. Nilsson, arranged with Mr. Henry E. Abbey for an extended tour for concerts only, beginning in October, 1882, and that Mr. Abbey agrees to pay Mme. Nilsson £20,000 for 100 concerts, beside traveling and hotel expenses for five people and beside a half-share in the nightly receipts over and above the sum of £600. This contract is very similar to that Mme. Nilsson made with Messrs. Max and Maurice Strakosch in 1869."

According to the New York papers the Kiralfy "Strogoff" at the Academy of Music is distinguished rather by brilliancy of stage setting and ballet than by good acting. The piece has been cut down since the first performance, and several scenes, notably the balloon voyage, are now omitted entirely. The Colville version at Booth's is reported to be much improved in every respect. W. J. Ferguson now plays the American Correspondent, vice Isidore Davidson, and, by his clever acting, adds materially to the strength of the cast at Mr. Stetson's theater.

Mr. Theodore Thomas has already received sixteen compositions, sent in to compete for the Cincinnati festival prize of next May. There will be a few more, which must arrive shortly, not to be outlawed. The general grade of work is said to be higher than in the pieces sent in two years ago. Then it was only composers of native birth who were invited to strive, now all resident American musicians are allowed to enter their works. Mr. Thomas will complete his examination of the compositions, and immediately forward them to his colleagues, Herr Capellmeister Reinecke and M. Saint-Saens.

A Hungarian journal gives the following account of the origin of the famous march of Rakoczy. When Franz Rakoczy I., the hero of the Magyar war of independence, was returning with his troops from the battlefield of Szibo, where he had conquered, Nov. 10, 1705, he heard the air played for the first time by a Tsigane Miska Barna, who gave it the name of the warrior. A descendant of Barna, the handsome Zinka, made the air known by playing it all over the country. At Stuhlweissenburg a musician, the Abbe Vacek, noted the air, and the march took a complete musical form in the hands of the composer Ruszieska. Then players began to add variations, many of which have been noted, while fresh variations are being improvised every day.

The Paris Figaro publishes some statistics which are interesting because they throw some light on the much discussed subject of the recent increase in the salaries of great singers. In 1831 Mme. Malibran, then the first of living prima donnas, received 1,250f. for each performance, about $250, while now $500, $1,000, and even $2,000 a night are by no means uncommon. In France, however, the salaries of singers do not appear to have been so high, for Mme. Pauline Viardot-Garcia, Malibran's sister, received only 1,000f. a night in 1849, when she created the role of Fides in "Le Prophete," and Mme. Kraus, the leading soprano at the Grand Opera in Paris, receives 1,500f. for each performance, which was also Faure's salary.

The following from a Glasgow paper indicates either a sublime egotism upon the part of the Duke of Edinburgh, or a strange unfamiliarity with his own composition: "On the occasion of the opening of the new docks at Leith, the Mars tender, Francis Mollison, with a detachment of fifty boys on board, accompanied by their band, and under the command of Capt. Scott, was one of the vessels which took part in the opening ceremony, which was performed by the Duke of Edinburgh. While nearing the Hercules the band began to play a piece of music of which his royal highness is the composer, and, after listening very attentively for some time to the strains, he remarked to one of his suite who accompanied him, 'That is quite refreshing after those pieces we hear so often.'"

Wagner, after long consideration, has selected Marianne Brandt of the Berlin Opera as the Kundry of his "Parsifal," the most difficult part in the opera. Kundry is of a mysterious double nature; partly in service of the holy grail and partly in that of the wizard Klingssor, now hatefully hideous in appearance, now taking on an enchanting shape as the temptress of Parsifal—angel and devil in one. Wild passion and the tenderest emotion belong to the part, which demands the highest musical capacity. Frl. Brandt has a magnificent contralto and is a wonderful actress as well. She is now in Bayreuth, studying the part under Wagner. She is in great demand just now. Neumann wanted to engage her for his Nibelungen production in London, but she had already entered into negotiations to appear in German opera in London under Hans Richter. She has also been invited to appear in a series of model opera performances at the Imperial Opera in Vienna next May, to be given in place of the customary Italian opera season.

An Alleged Correction.

St. Louis, September 17.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I was very disagreeably surprised at what your reporter made me say in your Thursday's issue, concerning the reception of the American physicians at the Medical Congress that recently met in London. Your young man wrote [illegible] a peculiar memory, as he took no notes while he was in my presence. After he left me he must have written his own questions and his own answers. I do not wish to be held responsible. Into these answers he has now and then sandwiched some of my expressions, but the whole is made to take on such a sensational character that it completely changes the sentiments that I gave him. What I said about Dr. Beard was concerning the expressions of a few individuals only whose lack of interest seemed to be from a doubt of the veracity of the doctor, but I had premised this adverse expression of mine by saying that it had transpired in his own rooms, not in the congress. I deny saying anything that could be construed into an expression that Dr. B. "feels very sore about the outcome of his trip." He stated that I had said that the congress was a great success. Had he given also what I had said to him concerning the efficiency of Sir Wm. MacConnac, the honorable secretary of the congress, and of Dr. Lemon, the secretary of the section in which I was most interested, he would have shown that what he made me say was too inconsistent to be true. What I said concerning the absence of the ex-presidents of the American Medical Association from the platform at the opening of the meeting could be given in five of your lines, nor would it have contained one word that was the least sensational. I deny giving him the last expression from which he could say that American physicians were "severely snubbed," except what I said about the absence of the ex-presidents of the American Medical Association and the private controversy of Dr. Beard. Please give this a prominent place in your paper, as I do not wish to appear guilty of ingratitude, when indeed I am proud of the reception given to the Americans at London. Yours respectfully,

Thos. F. Rumbold.

THE OTHER SIDE HEARD FROM.

St. Louis, September 17, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

As the reporter who interviewed Dr. Rumbold, I beg leave to state that I reported him as fairly as I knew how, and that his language is given verbatim in most places. I did take notes, as he will probably now recall, if his memory is not also peculiar, for he read me off figures and statistics, and gave me several names which he saw me put among my notes. He denies saying anything that could be construed into an expression that Dr. Beard felt sore about the outcome of his trip. He, of course, remembers telling me that Dr. Beard's veracity had been attacked, and that Dr. Beard had told him (Dr. Rumbold) that the physicians who came to Beard's rooms to hear him lecture at his (Beard's) invitation acted like "the howling mob that tried to push Bradlaugh into the Parliament House." He thinks that all he said about the ex-presidents of the American Medical Association not being invited to seats on the stand could be given in five lines. It would be a hard job to condense so closely and yet please a critic as learned as the Doctor's spelling shows him to be, since we talked about the matter nearly twenty minutes. He told me that Dr. Billings' paper was the only one well received; that the others, when criticised, were handled almost in a sneering manner, and that more than one American had his deductions flatly denied, and he agreed with me when I said that the general reception of the papers seemed, from his description, to be like that which a teacher gives to his pupils' compositions. If this is not snubbing, what is it?

"Pioneers of the Mississippi."

Capt. Willard Glazier, the "Soldier author," since his noted discovery in July last of the new source of the Mississippi above Itaska Lake, has with his characteristic pluck and energy pushed and paddled his little canoe over rapids, through rivulets, lakes and rivers down over 1,200 miles, and announces to arrive with his small birch-bark fleet at Davenport, Iowa, to-day, at which point in his onward course to the Gulf he this evening delivers his historic and popular lecture on "Pioneers of the Mississippi." He expects to reach St. Louis the last of the present month, and before leaving in his canoe for the far South will repeat his well prepared lecture, admission tickets to which, now in the hands of solicitors here, are finding ready sale.

The Value of Revaccination.

From the Sanitarian.

The report recently furnished at the instance of the Local Government Board of London relates to an average number of 10,504 persons permanently employed in the postal service, all of whom have been required to undergo revaccination on admission to the service, unless that operation had been performed within seven years previously. Among these persons during the ten years 1870-1879 there has not been a single fatal case of small-pox, and in only ten instances have there been non-fatal attacks, all of which were of very slight character. In the telegraph department, where the enforcement of revaccination has not been carried out with quite the same completeness, twelve cases have occurred in the same period among a staff averaging 1,458 in number. Eight of these attacks were of persons who had not been revaccinated, and one proved fatal. The remaining four were of revaccinated persons, who all perfectly recovered without pitting. This experience, like that of the nurses at the small-pox hospitals, seems to show that revaccinated persons enjoy absolute immunity from severe attacks of small-pox, and that their risk of catching that disease at all, even in its most modified form, is infinitesimal.

A DREAM.

Here—where last night she came, even she, for whom
I would so gladly live or lie down dead,
Came in the likeness of a dream and said
Some words that thrilled this desolate, ghost-thronged room—
I sit alone now in the absolute gloom,
Ah! surely on her breast was leaned my head,
Ah! surely on my mouth her kiss was shed,
And all my life broke into scent and bloom.
Give thanks, heart, for thy rootless flower of bliss,
Nor think the gods severe though thus they seem;
Though thou hast much to bear and much to miss,
Whilst thou thy nights and days to be canst deem
One thing, and that thing veritably this—
The imperishable memory of a dream.

Philip Bourke Marston.

WAITING.

He was tired of women of the world—Pierce Hayward decreed unto himself—tired of their wiles, their sophistries, their deceptions, their very attractions. Was it because these latter had, in one case, proved well-nigh fatal to his peace of mind—that Pauline Irving's dark, passionate, soul-lit eyes pursued him even here in this quiet country retreat, where he had taken refuge—that the memory of her low, musical voice nestled in the rustling leaves, or sighed with the sighing of the night wind?

He admitted to himself none of this reasoning, only said that he was tired; and when, in the course of his wanderings, he discovered the pretty daughter of the miller of the place, a shy maiden of some eighteen summers, he turned to her as to a new study.

She blushed when he spoke, and he fancied her blushes charming; she stammered when she answered him, and he imagined that rather would he have it thus than listen to any flow of wit from betwixt her crimson lips.

She was innocent as the flowers which she tended in her own garden, and he knew that she could boast than this no greater charm. Therefore, the idea came to him that he would marry her.

He was no wolf in man's clothing. It was no difficult task for him to read o'er-soon the love that he had awakened in this guileless heart; but take advantage of it to its own undoing, of this thought he was as pure as she.

Her sweet face grew very pale when, one evening, in the shadows, he asked her to become his wife. A frightened, startled look grew in the great blue eyes.

"I—I to be your wife?" she repeated. "Why, you are a gentleman, and I—"

She left the sentence unfinished—the gulf between them was too deep to bridge over with words.

"You are all that is sweet in woman!" he replied. "I am tired of art. I want nature. Promise me only to be as good, and pure, and artless as you are to-day, and I promise to try to be worthy of you. Edna, do you fear to trust your happiness to my keeping?"

"You love me, then?" she whispered, as though breathing an impossibility.

And he, believing that he spoke truth, answered, "Yes."

Then she flung herself into his arms and sobbed out her joy upon his heart. Her emotion startled him—it showed depths to her nature he had not known she possessed; but he quieted her with his kisses, and, as he walked home alone, having gained her father's consent to a speedy wedding, he consoled himself with the thought:

"I will be good to her. She will not be exacting. Of course she cannot be my companion in thought, in interest; but my plaything—yes."

The next month they were married. Pierce Hayward had been too long a cherished member of society not to have it desire with eager curiosity to see this hastily-wooed wife. But one woman read the newspaper announcement, in her boudoir, with a quick pang of pain. The paper dropped from her nerveless hands.

"Married!" she said to herself, over and over—"married! He took me at my word then. Yet may God grant him the happiness I have missed, or, rather, thrown away by a wretched pride and a momentary recklessness!"

But among the numerous calls on the child-wife was one drawn thither otherwise than by curiosity.

Edna took the card from the butler's hand with no premonition, and read the name as she had read the many names which he had brought her.

"Say to Miss Irving that I will see her immediately," she said to the man in whose august presence she always stood a little in awe in spite of herself—he looked so very superior in his splendid livery. "Another call, Pierce!" she cried, stopping an instant in the library where he sat, and holding the card before his eyes. "Why, how pale you are, dear! You are ill. Shall I excuse myself?"

"No, no! Go in at once," he answered, with the first touch of impatience in his tone he had ever shown her, and surveying her critically as he spoke, with a half dissatisfied air.

The face was young and lovely—none could deny that; but there was something in the general ensemble his artist eye missed—a something which as she entered the drawing-room and advanced to meet her guest, who rose, tall and graceful and exquisitely costumed, gave to Miss Irving's tones a gentler accent, as in her heart she whispered:

"Poor child! Some day she will need a friend. If she will let me I will be the friend she needs."

Let her? Of all her guests, none had charmed Edna as this beautiful lady. She found her telling her of her early life, of her courtship, and the strange, wonderful thing Pierce's love still seemed to her, and all the while her guest kept repeating to herself:

"Poor child!"

"Will you not come again soon?" she said, almost wistfully, when Miss Irving at last rose to leave. "Of course I will return your visit first; but I mean—I mean—"

"You mean that you would like we should be friends. I hope that is what you mean, for I am quite sure it is my wish."

The sweet smile was more than Edna could resist. Impulsively she lifted up the little mouth for a kiss.

"Please forgive me," she said, "but I love you already."

"Can he help loving her?" thought Pauline, as she drove homeward. "Could I have believed a week—an hour—ago that I would pray thus fervently that all his heart might be given to another woman?"

Pierce Hayward meant to be true to his vows, his wife and his manhood; but spite of himself, as the days wore into weeks and the weeks into months, a bitter sense of suicidal folly overwhelmed him.

He was a cultured, cultivated man of the world, and he had married a simple child, whose brain had grasped the rudiments of a common school education and had never gone beyond.

He saw her among his friends, and knew that they wondered that a pretty face could thus have bewitched him; and the knowledge of their wonder rankled in his soul. He saw her side by side with the beautiful, exquisitely graceful woman whom he had loved—for whom (God help him!) his love would not die. It had been but sleeping, and his misery warred against the iron hand of control with which he held it down.

He did not mean to be unkind, but Edna detected the impatience in his tone and the look of annoyance which sometimes swept across his handsome, expressive face—and her own heart grew sad and heavy; but, child as she was, her loyalty kept her silent even to her cherished friend.

One day, Pauline went to the house, but found her out.

"I will wait for her in the library," she said. "Tell her I am there."

She passed into the room, expecting to find it empty; but, instead, it was occupied by its master. His head was bowed upon the table, his whole attitude was one of misery which had thrown off its mask.

She turned to beat a retreat, but he lifted his face and saw her.

"Come in!" he said. "This is your work! It is fitting that you should look upon it."

"My work!" she answered aghast.

"Yes! Whose else? A year ago to-day I found that you had deceived me. Do you wonder that, miserable and wretched as I was, I sought to find a woman who had not learned the lesson of deception? I was mad! I bought a pretty toy, and thought to while away with it my hours of meditation—to use it as a charm to banish memory. Instead, it shows me every hour the falsity of my reasoning, and holds up to my tortured sight the 'might have been.' Why do I still love you? Why do I not rather curse you? Why do you come here day after day to add fuel to the flame?"

"I will never come again, Pierce. I thought, I prayed, you had long ceased to love me; but in this last moment I will tell you the truth. I did not deceive you: you were mad with jealous doubts, and I too proud to explain to you the truth—therefore I sent you from me. I thought you would come back; I did not dream—"

Her voice choked.

"That I could be such a mad, insensate fool," he finished, taking up her words. "Ah, Pauline, my one only love—" he added, under his breath.

"Hush!" she commanded imperiously. Be a man and true to your manhood. Edna loves you better than I know how to love, perhaps better than any man deserves. She is a simple child; honor her for it. I will not come here more. I will make to her some excuse. But, oh, make her happy, Pierce. What matters it to you and me? Our happiness is lost, but do not let that fact lead hers astray. See, I fall on my knees—I plead to you—I kiss your hand. By all that is pure in her life, do not let her dream your chains are not of flowers! It would kill her, as the cruel wind blasts with a single breath the shrinking, sensitive plant. Your soul is noble; prove it so. Be gentle, be loving, be tender. By the memory of your every hope for the future—by the memory of, if that may sway you—of your love for me—I—"

At that instant the portiere was swept back. Edna stood upon the threshold, but an Edna transformed from the timid, shrinking girl into a lioness. Her eyes flashed; her slight figure was almost tall, in indignation drawing to its full height; her voice rang out, clear and scornful.

"You need not fear," she said. "I have only heard your last sentence. I would not ply eaves-dropper a single instant—not even to more thoroughly expose the falseness of the woman who thus plays traitor to my husband. By the memory of his love for you! how dare you say that? He never loved you! Pierce, tell me that you never loved her!"

She sprang to his side and twined her hands about his arm.

"Edna," he said, "you are doing the bitterest wrong—I—"

Another minute and he would have told her all the truth, but Pauline had by this time regained her feet.

"Hush," she commanded him. "Not a single word! What could you say that would not further wreck her happiness? Nor would the storm which devastates her drive our ships into harbor. Good-by, Edna! Think of me as gently as you can. We both loved him. Let that plead my excuse."

Once her glance fell on his face. Again it entreated him in its voiceless eloquence to leave her in her belief, then she turned and left them. Without all was dark, but, thank God! she yet might look within.

The man's own unworthiness smote him as Edna fell weeping piteously in his arms. He felt a coward, that he dared not vindicate the noble woman who had left them, but the blow would strike with cruelest force on her who had done no wrong. His silence was his own bitterest punishment; but at least he might atone.

Very gentle, very tender was he to his child-wife. She no longer shrank at an impatient word or missed a something in her life. It seemed full to repletion—so full that when, at the close of one more short year, God called her to lay it down, she clung to the sweet boon with arms close pressed about her husband's neck.

"You never loved her?" she said, in that last hour. "Tell me, darling. She tried to win you from me, but she failed?"

"She never tried, my love. She taught me, rather, to love you."

She thought he meant that he thus had judged between them, and was content.

"Tell her," she whispered, "that I forgive her now because she loved you, even though her love was false and wicked. Oh, Pierce, how could any woman help loving you?"

They laid her away to rest, with her baby daughter on her breast, and they were honest tears of love and repentance and remorse which Pierce Hayward shed upon that new-made grave. Then he went abroad, and the world, looking at him, said that he had loved his wife in very deed, and wondered yet the more.

But after two years' travel he returned, to go straightway into Pauline Irving's presence. She was alone in the room into which the servant ushered him, and looked up with a great joy in the beautiful eyes.

"I am come at last, Pauline, my love! my love!" he said, advancing toward her with outstretched arms.

She let her weary head fall on his heart.

"And I have been waiting," she answered—"waiting always! I thought that I was tired, but I never shall be tired again."

Their secret was their own now, and they belonged each to the other. Yes, the secret was their own; but, in heaven, did Edna share it?

THE HOUSEHOLD.

Retail Prices of All Supplies that Cheer the Inner Man.

Between the warm summer months, when the law prohibits the killing and sale of nearly all kinds of game, and the extreme cold weather, when nature steps in and renders nearly all kinds of vegetables and fruit scarce, the bon vivant in this locality can just now enjoy an unlimited plenty of all kinds of table supplies. The cold weather is not old enough yet to effect any change in the prices of the edibles plentiful in summer, while the supply of game of all kinds will increase steadily for some months. In the vegetable kingdom the following varieties are found upon the shambles at medium prices:

Potatoes, 30 cents per peck.
Tomatoes, 70 cents a peck.
Onions, 50 cents a peck.
Cucumbers, 25 cents a dozen.
String beans, 35 cents a peck.
Cabbage, 15 to 25 cents a head.
Beets, 40 cents per peck.
Celery, 50 to 60 cents a bunch.
Sweet potatoes, 35 cents a peck.
Carrots, 40 cents a peck.
Egg plant, 15 to 25 cents each.
Lettuce, 5 cents a head.
Apples, 25 cents a peck.
Peaches, 50 cents, small.
Grapes, 5 cents a pound.
Watermelons, 15 to 40 cents each and scarce.
Cantaloupes, 15 to 35 cents each and very scarce.
Pears, 40 cents a peck.

The change in the weather will doubtless make a big improvement in the butter and egg supply. The best creamery butter sold for 35 cents per pound; best dairy 25 cents per pound; cooking, 12½ cents per pound. Eggs, 20 cents per dozen.

The butchers' figures vary only with the part of the animal selected. Beef is from 15 to 18 cents per pound; veal, 15 to 18 cents; mutton, 12½ cents; pork, 12½ cents; corn beef, 12½ cents.

If any change will occur in the supply of fish during the next few weeks it will certainly be to give a little better variety than has been furnished during the hot summer months, when the principal shipments to this city were to a few enterprising dealers who got a corner on frogs' legs or some such supply and made money. Fish were sold as follows on the stands: Trout 12½ cents per pound, salmon 12½ cents, white fish 12½ cents, buffalo 15 cents, croppy and bass 20 to 35 per bunch of half dozen, according to size. The best oysters sold for 55 cents per can; other brands 40 and 30 per can.

A MUSICAL MOVE.

St. Louis to Have a Musical Union and First-Class Concerts.

Through the energetic efforts of Mr. Dabney Carr and Prof. Waldauer, St. Louisans will have a series of first-class concerts next winter. For some years the heavenly muse has slumbered, and this enterprise will be welcomed by many music-loving citizens. The managers have circulated a petition in which the signer pledged himself to financially assist in making the St. Louis Musical Union a success. Already 280 signers agreeing to contribute $20 each have appended their names to the petition. A number of gentlemen who are desirous of contributing and in that way obtaining a seat at the concerts, as none will be sold, have not been called upon. Such persons are requested to send their names to the managers, who will call on them. A series of six concerts will be given and six grand dress rehearsals. It will be necessary to have 300 subscribers, at $20 each, to make the movement a success, and nearly that number of gentlemen have signed the subscription paper already. Twenty-five more signatures will assure the success of the Union. The 280 subscribers already secured are the result of the unassisted efforts of Mr. Carr and Prof. Waldauer. After laboring so earnestly and successfully in the formation of the Union, it is to be hoped that some prominent citizens will come to the front and crown the efforts of these gentlemen. The orchestra will be made up of the best local talent, while musicians from abroad will be brought here to assist. The first concert will be given November 17, to be followed by five others, one every month, at Mercantile Library Hall. On the Wednesday afternoon preceding a grand dress rehearsal will be given. Each subscriber will be given three tickets for every concert and three for every matinee. None but subscribers will be admitted. The number of pieces for the orchestra, which will be under the direction of Prof. Waldauer, has not yet been decided on, but nothing will be left undone to make the concerts a success, and a full orchestra of the best musicians to be secured will be had. The St. Louis Musical Union is now an assured success, and thanks are due to Mr. Dabney Carr and Prof. Waldauer for the same.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Knights of Bedlam, a colored secret society, gave a ball at Turner Hall last night.

The Comptroller and members of the Board of Public Improvements will visit the Arsenal to-day.

Dickey Edwards is missing from his home at 721 South Fourth street. He is thirteen years old, and has been very ill of late.

Officer Tom Dunnigan has commenced walking a beat, and has been succeeded by Officer Wooster as clerk in the Chief's office.

Dr. P. D. Yost yesterday examined the applicants for positions on the police force, and they are reported a young, strong, active lot.

Edward Langert had his foot badly hurt at the Northern Mills, Second and Angelica streets, yesterday, by the falling of an iron rail.

Robert W. Higgins was yesterday arrested by Officer Schaefer. Higgins is insane and will be returned to the Insane Asylum, where he has been once before.

When the alarm came in early Thursday morning, Frank Loftus, the pipeman with the Twelves, jumped into his pants and boots so quickly as to tear the nail entirely from his great toe.

At half-past 1 o'clock this morning the dead body of an unknown man was found near the corner of Poplar and Fourteenth streets by the patrolman on that beat. The body was removed to the Morgue, and awaits identification.

Little Jessie Hall will be tendered a complimentary benefit at Mercantile Library Hall on Friday evening, September 30. On that occasion Miss Jessie will appear as the Duchess De Tornqueva in "Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady."

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. Brank, who is attending the meeting of the Presbytery at Montgomery City, the pulpit of the Central Presbyterian Church, Garrison and Lucas avenues, will be filled to-morrow morning by Rev. Dr. Rhodes, of St. Mark's English Evangelical Lutheran Church.

R. S. MacDonald presided at the meeting of the executive committee of the Humane Society last night. Officer Creecy and three assistants will keep a close watch on coal teamsters who overload their teams. R. S. MacDonald and Edward Hayden will visit the Stock Yards at East St. Louis and endeavor to interest that company in establishing an agent at the Union Depot to look after the stock that is said to arrive and depart without food or water. The fountain at the foot of Washington avenue will be opened at 12 o'clock Monday.

William Fields called on Dr. Luedeking yesterday and asked to be registered as a physician. He had a diploma, but did not have it with him. He did have a certificate from the clerk of St. Louis county, though, so Dr. Luedeking registered Dr. Fields, but kept the certificate. Shortly afterward, Dr. Fields returned with his diploma, which was from a Philadelphia college hitherto unheard of. Dr. L. said that he would just keep the certificate, and at the next meeting of the Board of Health the status of that Philadelphia college will be investigated. Dr. Fields is wrathy over what he considers gross indignities.

The fall meeting of the Presbytery of St. Louis is now being held in Montgomery City, Mo. The meeting began on yesterday afternoon and was opened with a sermon by the last moderator, Rev. T. Carr Barrett, pastor of Mizpah Church, near Bridgeton, St. Louis County. Nearly all the churches in the bounds of the Presbytery are represented by a minister and elder. This Presbytery is in connection with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, and is popularly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church. The last General Assembly sent down for the consideration of its Presbyteries a revised form of directory for worship, and this will be one of the subjects discussed and passed upon at this meeting of the St. Louis Presbytery.

A Dramatic Scene in Court.

Special to the Chicago Times.

A few years since, Henry King was sentenced to serve a life term in Dannemora prison, for murdering a New York City detective. A short time after the shooting of President Garfield King and another convict named Hamilton got into an altercation regarding the character of Vice-President Arthur and his fitness to administer the affairs of the nation in the event of Garfield's death and Arthur's succession to the Presidency. Hamilton made some remark which was not complimentary to Arthur, whereupon King struck his brother convict two blows on the head with an axe, killing him instantly. King was tried on the charge of murder at the Circuit Court in session in Plattsburg yesterday, Justice Landon presiding. Three witnesses were sworn for the prosecution—the prison physician, a cook and one of the keepers. No evidence was introduced in behalf of the prisoner. The taking of testimony occupied about one hour and a half, when the jury retired. After an absense of about two hours they returned and requested the Judge to explain the legal difference between murder in the first and second degree. His Honor was about to reply, when the prisoner arose to his feet and said: "Your Honor and gentlemen of the jury, this was not a murder in the second degree; it was a deliberate and premeditated murder. I know that I have done wrong, that I ought to confess the truth, and that I ought to be hung." Here the prisoner's counsel tried in vain to silence him. "No," continued King, "I have done wrong. It is my duty to confess it, and I can not help doing so. I cannot keep still. I plead guilty to murder in the first degree. It was fifteen minutes from the time I struck the first blow with the axe until I struck him the second time; and all this time I kept thinking, I will finish this man.' If that is not premeditated murder, what is it? I have already killed two men. What is my life to me? The life of either of these two men whom I have killed is worth a dozen of mine." The prisoner then sat down, whereupon the Judge informed the jury "that, in view of the prisoner's admission that the murder was premeditated, there was no necessity for further explanation of law on his part." The jury thereupon retired, and very soon came back with a verdict of guilty. In response to the question as to whether he had anything to say why the sentence of death of death should not be passed on him, King replied: "Nothing, sir. The sentence is a just one. I ought to be hung." He was sentenced to be hanged at Plattsburg on the 4th of November next, between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon. King is said to be a remarkably intelligent man. His appearance in court was certainly impressive, and his deliberate manner when addressing the court and jury made the scene dramatic. The doomed man is 31 years of age, was born in New York City, where his mother resides, and was educated in the Roman Catholic faith.

The Little Ocean Nuisance.

Boston (Mass.) Special to Chicago Tribune.

The dory Little Western, which has occasioned much annoyance to ocean steamers by causing them to turn off their course on the supposition that she was a boat containing a shipwrecked crew, arrived at Gloucester this afternoon, having completed the round trip from Gloucester to London, England, and back. She measured only nineteen and a half feet long and two and a half in depth, and is the smallest boat that ever crossed the Atlantic and the only one that has crossed the ocean both ways. The crew of two men had a pretty rough time coming back from England. They left London June 14, and were thirteen days reaching the Lizard, and had boisterous weather all the way to Halifax, where she arrived on the 2d inst. This is the third "ocean tramp" Gloucester has sent out. The first was the Centennial, which went to England in 1877 with only one man on board, and the other the Nautilus, with the Andrews brothers on board, in 1878. The Little Western was only forty-four days on her outward trip and was ninety-two days on her return, including stops at Cape Breton and Halifax.

A Professional Stumper.

From the Columbus, O., Journal.

About a week ago a man giving the name of Custer, and claiming to hail from the State of Michigan, called on the Republican State Committee, and wished to be engaged to make speeches during the campaign, requesting a consideration for his services. He was politely informed that there was no fund for that purpose, and that, any way, that was not the manner of doing business. The would-be orator, however, could not be shaken off, and finally made the proposition that he would make speeches at the price of $5 per speech. This offer was again flatly refused, and he went his way. He is now making stump speeches for the Prohibitionists. He probably has entered into some satisfactory arrangement with the great reform party.

"My wife," said a hard-featured old Benedick, talking in the tobacco warehouse, yesterday, when the subject of conversation was "women," "is one of the largest-hearted women I have ever known. She thinks first of herself, second of the children, third of her relatives, fourth of her friends, fifth of her acquaintances, sixth of her husband. Mighty few ladies can get over so much ground as that, I can tell ye."

LODGE LACONICS.

Secret Society Reports for the Past Week.

Masons, Odd Fellows, Nationals, Workmen, Foresters, A. L. of H., K. of H., Etc., Etc.

The Masons.

Occidental Lodge, No. 163, held a regular communication on Monday evening.

St. Louis R. A. Chapter conferred the Past Master and Most Excellent Master degrees on Friday evening.

Cosmos Lodge, No. 282, also held a regular meeting the same evening, and conferred the third degree. The attendance was large.

St. Aldemar Commandery, No. 18, K. T., and Ascalon, No. 16, will hold regular conclaves to-night. Work will be done in both commanderies.

Dr. John D. Vincil, Secretary of the Grand Lodge, is at Moberly, Mo., in attendance at the annual conference of the M. E. Church South. He is also secretary of that body.

W. R. Stubblefield, Grand Master, had an engagement to dedicate a new hall at Reedsville, Callaway county, to-day, but owing to a press of business at home he could not go, and delegated his authority to Peter Godfrey, of Fulton.

George Washington Lodge, No. 9, conferred the third degree on Tuesday night. There were fifty members and visitors present. The officers were assisted in the work by W. R. Stubblefield, Grand Master, Thos. C. Ready, Past Grand Master, and Lee A. Hall, Grand Junior Warden.

I. O. O. F.

A new Odd Fellows' lodge will be instituted at Atlanta to-night.

Grand Master Woodward will shortly go to Cape Girardeau on official business.

Fifteen hunered dollars' worth of new books have just been added to the Odd Fellows' Library at Sacramento, Cal.

Helvetia Lodge, No. 1, Zurich, Switzerland, has been the recipient of 300 francs as a donation to its widows and orphans' fund from some unknown person.

The Grand Master of Missouri has issued warrants to Rich Hill Lodge, No. 411, at Rich Hill, Bates county, and to Atlanta Lodge, No. 412, at Atlanta, Macon county.

The Odd Fellows' Library at San Francisco, Cal., is one of the most prosperous institutions in the country, and much interest is taken in it by the order in that city. It has some 30,000 volumes, and during the month of July there were 6,930 books issued to readers.

Grand Master Woodward has just returned from a trip through the northern part of the State, where he has been looking after the interests of the order. At Macon seven lodges convened, and a lodge of instruction was had. The Grand Master was as far north as Lancaster, and reports the membership of the order in fine condition. Crops are fine in Northern Missouri, and Odd Fellows in that section are jubilant.

The Annual Movable Committee of the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows in England held its meeting in Southport the last week in August. Four hundred and fifty-nine delegates were present from all parts of the kingdom. The capital of this vast institution is $23,545,540. The expenditures for sick and funeral benefits for the year amounted to $16,552,020. In addition, however, large sums were paid to widows and orphans out of a voluntary fund instituted for that purpose.

Knights of Honor.

The trustees of St. Louis Lodge are looking for a hall better suited to the tastes of the society than the one now occupied.

Assessment No. 87 in the Knights of Honor has been called in and No. 88 ordered paid in thirty days from the 15th inst.

St. Louis Lodge, No. 13, initiated seven new members at its meeting on last Monday evening, and five petitions for membership were received. When all applicants have been initiated the lodge will be more than 300 strong.

A. O. U. W.

Two applications were received and referred at the meeting of Jefferson Lodge, No. 14, last Monday evening.

Missouri Lodge, No. 3, at its meeting last Saturday evening, received one application for membership, as did also Einigkeit Lodge, No. 3, which met on the same evening.

The heirs of William W. Robbins, who died on the 4th of last August, have this week received a benefit of $2,000 from the A. O. U. W. Mr. Robbins had been a member of this order for nearly two years, his membership being in Warsaw Lodge, No. 154, Warsaw, Mo.

National Americans.

The members of Continental are expected to meet in the anteroom of Lafayette, corner of Carondelet Park avenue at o'clock.

Several associations are making arrangements for open meetings next month, and will probably make it lively among the boys.

Washington, Americus, Fulton and Putnam Associations each held lively meetings last week. Mt. Vernon will meet next Tuesday.

Columbia Association, No. 1, holds her own although they have been applying the ax to delinquent members and are weeding out those who do not come to time with assessments.

There will probably be a convention of delegates from the various associations in this State held on the 23d inst. to discuss the plan of electing State representatives instead of establishing a State Association.

Continental Association, No. 2, has the largest number of members and is rapidly increasing. At the meeting last Wednesday it was resolved to visit Lafayette Association, No. 15, in a body on next Tuesday evening.

Florissant Valley Association, No. 19, have fitted up the Belleville Hall, and will hold their regular meetings every Saturday night at Florissant. The association is growing rapidly, and promises to be one of the best in the State.

The death rate in this organization has fully justified the originators in the proposition that this is the cheapest beneficiary organization in the country. Persons who belong to this and to other organizations feel the difference in the number of their assessments.

The associations have resumed operations and were all well attended last week. Quite a number of applications were filed and the members looked cheerful after a summer's vacation. A new association was organized at St. Joe, Mo., and several others are being organized.

I. O. B. F.

The Independent Order of Benevolent Foresters is the name of a new secret order composed of former members of the Independent Order of Foresters (now United Order of Foresters) who were dissatisfied with the financial management of the old order, being convinced that the money collected for widows and orphans was used for other purposes. The business of the Independent Order of Benevolent Foresters is managed by a Board of Trustees, and each lodge is represented in said board, and hence each individual member can know the financial condition of the order. No high or supreme officers are known, and hence no unnecessary and heavy expenses will have to be paid. The new order started with Lodges Lincoln, Benton and Eureka and members of other courts. The Trustees have called their first assessment, to be paid by the last of this month. The widows and orphans will receive their money promptly, after proof of death has been properly filed. Any court or individual member in good health and financial standing in the I. O. T. will be admitted in the new order up to the 24th of this month if proper application is made to either of the above lodges, or to Henry Marquardt, President Board of Trustees, 106 South Eighth street.

American Legion of Honor.

Two new councils will soon be instituted in this order in St. Louis.

Marquette Council announces a literary and musical entertainment for October 17.

St. Louis Council, No. 222, initiated three candidates at its meeting last Monday evening.

The American Legion of Honor has a total membership of 40,000, of whom 600 are in the State of Missouri. The order is not yet three years old, and its members and friends look to its future with bright hopes.

George T. Murphy, treasurer of Marquette Council, No. 590, has just been made treasurer of the St. Louis Book and News Company. Mr. Murphy has hosts of friends in St. Louis who will rejoice at his promotion.

Frank J. Smith, of Houston, Texas, is attending the session of the Supreme Lodge of the Knights and Ladies of Honor now being held in this city. He is chairman of the Supreme Trustees of this order, and also Supreme Vice-Commander of the A. L. of H.

O. M. P.

P. M. Hunt has recently organized a lodge in the southern part of the city.

One member was initiated at the meeting of Star Lodge, No. 6, on Thursday evening.

J. R. Kittridge, of Towanda, Pa., has just applied for a charter to organize a lodge at his place.

There is a general movement all along the line. Extensive preparations are making for a rapid increase during the coming fall and winter.

The order has not been doing much during the hot season, but with cooler weather comes a revival of interest and the lodges are beginning to do good work again.

A new lodge was organized at Blackburn, Mo., a few days since. Past Master H. E. Mundorf has applied for and received a commission to organize lodges in Iowa and Nebraska.

The new Lodge lately organized by T. K. Sage, on Easton and Garrison avenues, is composed of representative business men of the city. At their meeting last Monday evening Messrs. A. C. Travis, John W. Batdorf and H. G. Craft were initiated and the petitions for membership of Richard D. Blannerbassett, A. N. Craig, Ed. Wachter, A. P. Clark and Lee McMickin were granted.

The O. M. P has been well advertised in some of the Eastern States, and competent and reliable men have been induced to take hold of the matter in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and Massachusetts. Although the growth has not been great during the past few months, the Supreme Secretary has not been idle. He has advertised the order extensively and is now in daily receipt of communications from societies in various States who have become interested and desire to organize lodges in their respective localities.

The Knights of the Maccabees.

Mount and St. Louis and German Tents will all hold meetings next week.

At a meeting held by H. Clay Sexton Tent they went through their regular routine of business and received several applications.

George Washington Tent, No. 217, at their meeting on last Saturday evening had a good meeting and worked in the initiatory degree. Several applications were received.

At a meeting held by Court Olive Tent, No. 255, on last Monday evening, they had a very good attendance and went through their regular routine of business and closed in due form and peace prevailing.

At a meeting held by Missouri Tent on last Saturday evening they had a very good attendance. This tent is going to have a dramatic entertainment at the Park Theater, on Second Carondelet avenue, some time this month, and a good time is expected.

At a meeting held by F. W. Danne Tent, No. 294, they went through their regular routine of business and received four applications for membership. Their German ritual will be here in a few days. This tent will yet be the banner tent in St. Louis.

U. O. F.

Court Flora, No. 1, held a very interesting session on Monday evening, at which ten members were initiated and five applications received. It looks as though Court Flora is enjoying a boom.

Order of the Red Cross.

There will be a meeting on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock to organize a new commandery of this order, and all wishing to come in will call at 817 Brooklyn street.

Knights of Pythias.

The Knights of Pythias of Sedalia will give a complimentary entertainment to the Grand Lodge of Missouri on Tuesday evening, October 18, in that city. The invitations to the affair are very neat in design and are a marvel of the printer's art.

Knights of Father Mathew.

St. Teresa's Council is making an effort to secure a library, and to attain this end propose to give a series of literary entertainments during the winter. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday evening next, when several new members will be initiated.

St. Louis Council, No. 1, held their regular meeting at 1306 Olive street on last Thursday evening, Mr. Albert Hercules, Deputy C. S. K., presiding. The following new members were initiated: Thos. E. Dillon, E. T. Howard, Joseph J. Furlong, Frank E. Brennan, Thomas Murphy, Thomas Ronan, James Dolen, John P. Dillon and Geo. W. Watson. Seven applications for membership were received and referred to respective committees. Committee on by-laws submitted their report, which was on motion adopted.

An executive board meeting of the Supreme Council was held on last Wednesday evening with eight members in attendance, Rev. P. F. O'Reilly presiding. A committee of three composed of Messrs. Rev. P. J. O'Reilly, D. O'C. Tracy and Thomas Morris were appointed to attend the convention of the R. C. T. A. & B. Parade Union, which will be held to-morrow afternoon at the Knights' Hall, 1306 Olive street, at 2 o'clock p. m. After transacting business of minor importance the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

St. Bridget's Council, No. 8, held a special meeting at St. Bridget's School Hall on last Thursday evening, with twenty-four members in attendance. A committee, composed of Messrs. P. C. Jourdan, Jno. B. Fleming, L. Ballingall, John Coughlin and M. O'Donnell, was appointed to draft by-laws for the council. Mr. D. O'C. Tracy delivered a brief but very effective address on the object of the order, and the advantages of temperance. The regular meetings of this council will be held the second and fourth Thursday of each month.

The regular meeting of Annunciation Council, No. 3, was held on last Monday evening at their hall on Sixth and Labadie streets, with twenty-seven members in attendance, Mr. P. B. Hulack presiding. Several applications for membership were received and referred. This council is in a very flourishing condition, and its members are zealous in their efforts to make this one of the most prosperous of the order. A debating and dramatic club is being formed, with a view of making each meeting amusing as well as beneficial, and a lecture by a prominent and popular speaker is a fact of the near future.

The Knights of Father Mathew Literary and Debating Club held their regular meeting on last Monday evening and elected officers as follows: President, Daniel O'C. Tracy; Vice-President, Patrick Long; Honorary Vice-President, Miss Mary Baker; Secretary, Chas. C. Concannon; Treasurer, Hugh Hennessy; Librarian, R. D. Kerwin. The committee on constitution reported having completed their labors and were on motion discharged. Mr. Gorman as chairman, of committee to purchase a piano for the use of the club, reported progress and requested more time, and was on motion given until next meeting to complete the purchase. It was decided that a debate of one hour be held at every alternate meeting, and on recommendation of the committee on amusement the subject of "Is it ever right to marry for money?" was selected for the meeting of September 26. After the regular order of business was transacted, the miscellaneous exercises were taken up, which consisted of singing, declaiming and reciting, in which Misses Nellie Lewis, Belle Holmes, Mary S. Baker, Regina Lewis and Messrs. O'Connor, Cahill and Hagerty took part. Special mention is due Miss Regina Lewis for the effective and eloquent recitation entitled "Rienzi's Address to the Romans;" also to Mr. W. J. O'Connor, for a song entitled "Come and join us," it being original and written by him for the Knights of Father Mathew. The next meeting will be held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the Knights' hall.

THE Norfolk Virginian lately mentioned, among other cases, that of a prominent druggist of Warrenton, N. C., who, on a business trip to Norfolk, severely injured himself by falling on the ice. By advice he used St. Jacobs Oil, with such happy result that he went on his way cured and rejoicing.

Y. M. C. A.

Mr. P. E. Page will conduct the gospel meeting for young men at the Y. M. C. A. to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The song service in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. this evening at 8 o'clock will be conducted by Mr. C. C. Nicholls.

The union gospel service at the Y. M. C. A. building, corner Eleventh and Locust streets, at 8 o'clock to-morrow evening, will be addressed by Mr. Chas. R. Garrison.

To-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock the Chinese Sunday-school in connection with the Y. M. C. A. will hold a service in the parlors of the Association, under the direction of the superintendent, Mr. C. E. Ford.

Mr. H. T. Williams, secretary of the Railroad Y. M. C. A. at Kansas, passed through St. Louis last week on his return from Northfield, Mass. He will begin his labors as State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Ohio in a few days.

The Thursday night prayer meetings conducted by the Y. M. C. A. in the old Walnut Street Presbyterian Church, corner Sixteenth and Walnut streets, continue to grow in interest and in numbers. They will be conducted every Thursday evening through the winter.

Mr. Walter C. Douglass, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, left last Tuesday evening in company with Mr. O. P. Rice, of the Indianapolis and St. Louis Railroad, for a few days' fishing in the vicinity of the Thousand Islands. He expects to return about Tuesday of next week.

At 4:15 p. m. to-morrow Mr. S. C. King, the new assistant secretary of the railroad branch of the Y. M. C. A., will conduct a gospel meeting for employes of the different railroads at the building in East St. Louis. Mr. King has this week taken full charge of the building at that point and his headquarters there.

Open-air services to-morrow by the Y. M. C. A. will be held as usual at five different points in the city. The service last Sunday at the foot of Olive street was attended by a much larger audience than usual, owing to the boat race, which was at that time in progress. These meetings will be discontinued unless the weather should change warmer within the next few days.

Why the True Holman Liver Pad Succeeds: Because it is the first and only correct adaptation of the Holman absorption theory of cure without medicine. Why its imitators fail: Because they are worthless.

Walter Conrad was last night arrested by Officer Burke and Private Watchman Daniels, and taken to the Four Courts. It is charged that Conrad, who is a switchman in the Union Depot yards, stole a bucketful of pears from a freight car standing on the Pacific track.

THE LEADING EXTERNAL SPECIFIC FOR SKIN DISEASES
A Beautifier of the Complexion.

It renders the Cuticle Healthful, Clear, and Smooth, and is the best possible substitute for expensive Sulphur Baths. It will heal Ulcers and Sores.

Persons employing it have no need to resort to Sulphur Springs for bathing purposes.

It is a desirable DISINFECTANT of CLOTHING or BED LINEN, and a capital remedy and preventive of Obnoxious or Contagious Diseases. It is also valuable as an injection.

As an adjunct of the TOILET, it is far more desirable than any cosmetics.

TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES, and BLOTCHES yield to its influence; and it is the very best soap to shave with, leaving the skin smooth. It also ERADICATES DANDRUFF. The article is endorsed by the Medical fraternity.

Notice of Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the stockholders of this company will be held on the 28th day of September next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the company, in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, for the purpose of acting upon the following agreements made by its Board of Directors:

1. An agreement with the Cairo and Vincennes Railway Company for the consolidation of that company with this company. The said agreement also provides for the issue in exchange for the common stock of said company of common stock of this company to the amount of not exceeding three millions five hundred thousand dollars, being an increase of the capital stock of this company to that extent.
2. An agreement with the Danville and Southwestern Railway Company for the consolidation of said Company with this Company.
3. An agreement with the St. Francisville and Lawrenceville Railroad Company for the consolidation of said Company, with this Company.

Each of the foregoing agreements provides for the issue by this company of its five per cent bonds to the amount of three millions eight hundred and fifty-seven thousand dollars ($3,857,000), secured by mortgage upon the railroads and property of the said Cairo, Danville and St. Francisville companies. Said issue of bonds is to be paid to the stockholders of the said three companies and for rolling stock of said Cairo company in the proportions specified in said agreements.

4. An agreement between the St. Louis Bridge Company, the Tunnel Railroad Company of St. Louis, the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Company, and the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, for the lease by the two last named companies of the Bridge over the Mississippi River, and the Tunnel and Railroad Tracks, and for the acquisition by the lessee companies of the common stock of said St. Louis Bridge Company.

QUESTIONS OF AGE.

A Point to be Brought Out in Some Important Criminal Suits.

The case of Patrick Goff was docketed in the Court of Criminal Correction for argument on a law point. A few days ago Assistant Circuit Attorney Noonan, while filling the Prosecuting Attorney's chair, during Mr. Hogan's absence, tried a charge of embezzling $4 against Goff. When the State concluded its case the attorney for the defence said that the statutes provided for two kinds of embezzlement—embezzlement by a boy under 16 years is no offence under the law. For any one over sixteen years it is a felony to embezzle over $30 and a misdemeanor for under that amount. In the case in question the State did not bring out the age of the defendant, and on this ground a dismissal was asked for. Judge Cady thought the question of sufficient moment to set it for the law docket for to-day, but when the case was called he said the defendant had been sufficiently punished for the offense by confinement in jail, and he was accordingly discharged. This is the point brought up in the Gordon murder case, when the jury thought they were sending James Gordon to the penitentiary for ten years, but were shown by Mr. J. J. McBride, the boy's attorney, that that sentence meant one year in jail under the law of minors committing felonies. According to a decision of the Supreme Court, when a minor is on trial for a felony the question of age can not be brought out except by the Judge. This point will be studied up for the Patsy Early murder case.

Bicycle Briefs.

Mack Evans is the latest addition to our local bi club. Mack is well put up and straddles a 54-inch with ease and grace.

A run of the Missouri Bicycle Club is called for to-morrow morning at 6:30 from the residence of Capt. Bain, on Park avenue.

This day week at 4:30 p. m. the race for the one mile championship of the Missouri Bicycle Club takes place at the Fair Grounds. Six entries to date. A record of as least 3:20 is confidently looked for.

Giles, the Chicago tricycle maker, was in town this week and called at the local club's headquarters. He reports the 'trike' gaining favor, especially in the last month, and will send a sample machine to the M. B. C for exhibition this fall or winter.

A meet of the Missouri Bicycle Club took place last Sunday at 2:30 p. m., when a run was made to Manchester via Forest Park and Bartold. At Manchester a supper was partaken of with a zest peculiar to wheelers, and the return made by moonlight. The following tough ones made the round trip: Messrs. Young, Drew, Beckers, Lueders and Garvey, and forty miles was placed to the credit of each on the log book.

DeCivry is evidently the coming man. He has downed John Keen for the third time in a twenty-mile race August 25, at the Crystal Palace grounds. From the tenth mile his time becomes the professional record, making the entire twenty miles in 64 minutes 27¼ seconds. De Civry rode a 57-inch French machine. Keen rode a 58-inch Coventry machine of his own make, but retired after registering ten miles inside of thirty-two minutes.

Bodies in the Morgue.

Superintendent Heitmeyer made the following report to Coroner Frank of the bodies in the Morgue to-day: Body of Antoine Henna, brought here September 12, from City Hospital; body of Gustave Mattlie, brought here from corner of Todd's Lane and Lafayette avenue, where he was run over and killed by his own wagon September 16; body of an unknown white man brought here from Poplar street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. Description: About 55 years old, five feet eight inches high; weighs about 150 pounds; has light-blue eyes, fair complexion, gray hair and small chin whiskers; is dressed in a pair of gray jeans pants, red flannel undershirt, white canton flannel underwear, an old and faded gingham overshirt, heavy kip boots, lately half-soled. The man was run over by some unknown team. The ninth and tenth ribs on right side are broken. The man was found on the street by Officers Burke and Wall.

THE EX-CONFEDERATES.

Senator Vest Writes a Letter on the Subject of the Reunion.

A Preliminary Meeting—Major Mellon's Anticipations—Officers of the Day.

The ex-Confederates of St. Louis meet at the Court-house, to complete their arrangements to go to the reunion at Moberly the 28th. The roster at Maj. John S. Mellon's office already shows that the St. Louis delegation will be a large one, sufficiently so to justify a special train. At this evening's meeting a complete organization will be effected. The indications are that between four and five hundred will go from here.

"It is a reunion of ex-Confederates," Maj. Mellon said to-day, "but we have sent our invitations far and wide to ex-Federal soldiers, and we expect those who wore the blue to be there in strong numbers. Gen. A. J. Smith and Gen. John D. Stephenson are among those we count on. There will be between 20,000 and 25,000 people present to judge from the indications. The Moberly people have established a big commissary committee and arranged for the barbecue of twenty or thirty beeves with all the accompaniments. This is an off year in politics and there can be no coloring of that kind given to our gathering. We meet for a social good time, to talk over pleasantly the old war time. The St. Louis party will go in good style, taking a full band of music along."

FROM SENATOR VEST.

The gentlemen having charge of the reunion have received a letter from United States Senator Vest, which will be read. It is from Greenbriar, Va. The Senator writes that Mrs. Vest's health is in such a condition that the physician says he must not leave Virginia before October. He expresses his regret that this prevents him from being at Moberly, and the expressions which follow show that his regret is genuine. He goes on to congratulate the Missourians who left their homes "in 1861 to go with Sterling Price" for "the patriotism they have exhibited in war and in peace." This devotion to duty he hopes to see continued. He says he thought the tears and sorrow of the South at the shooting of Garfield would remove the malice and suspicion entertained by the North and is disappointed that such has not been the case. To illustrate, he quotes from Gen. Grant's recent utterances, that "pensions must be paid to none but Union soldiers," and asks what "drug" can have so changed the speaker since his words at Cairo and Bloomington, when he paid tribute to the present devotion to their country of those who wore the gray. The language of Grant is an insinuation of the basest sort, for ex-Confederates have neither asked nor thought of pensions. The Senator's letter is not long, but is in his best vein, and the masses at Moberly will make the welkin ring when they hear it.

THE ORGANIZATION

of "the reunion" has already been agreed upon and will be as follows:

President—Col. Elijah Gates, of Jefferson City.

Vice-Presidents—Judge Warwick Hough, Supreme Court, Jefferson City; Gen. Jo. O. Shelby, Higginsville; Major Harvey Salmon, Versailles; Capt. Logan Enyart, Nebraska City, Neb.; Capt. Wm. A. Richardson, Monticello.

Marshal of the Day—Maj. John S. Mellon, St. Louis, who will appoint his own assistants.

READER, if you have not taken Maguire's Quinine and Iron Cordial do not fail to do so and its beneficial effect will surprise you. See advertiement in another column.

TREASURES IN MAIL PACKAGES.

The Careless Manner in which Money and Valuables are Sent.

Some people have a great deal of confidence in the postal system of this country, or else they are considerably too careless in making use of the mails. Every now and then the Post-office folks have a story to tell of treasure discovered in queer packages, and it is often through the sheerest luck that the articles reach their destination. To-day a POST-DISPATCH reporter dropped in on Col. Wright, superintendent of carriers, and had his attention called to a copy of the Chicago Times done up in an ordinary envelope. The mark "not found" was placed over the address in blue pencil, and the three-cent stamp up in the corner looked as if its mission had been a wasteful one.

"The carrier," said Col. Wright, "took the paper to the address given, but could find no person answering the name. He felt something hard in the package, and, opening it, as he is bound to do by law, discovered these three five dollar gold pieces done up in this show bill, which the owner can have by proving his property."

"That's nothing," said one of the clerks, "we frequently have things like that to happen. But I think the worst piece of carelessness I ever saw was the other day. We opened a package done up loosely in brown paper, and right on top of a box of cigars between the wrapping paper and the box found two $100 bills lying. The package was addressed to a business man here to whom it was delivered."

Many cases analogous to those here given came to the knowledge of the Post-office authorities, while many more equally strong evidences of carelessness on the part of citizens are never brought to light. The moral is plain: People should be careful in directing and making up packages intended for the mail.

BARNUM ON MONDAY.

Route of the Grand Spectacular Procession—Contemplated Invasion of Our Country Cousins.

Expectation concerning the show event of the season will reach its culmination on Monday by the advent of the colossal coalition known as P. T. Barnum's Greatest Show on Earth and the Great London Circus. That portion of the public who are at all posted regarding exhibitions under canvass are aware that the latter entertainment was the only formidable rival of the Barnum Show, and the meed of superiority between them was contended for over many a well-fought field. The visitor to these two great rivals might well exclaim with Capt. McHeath, "Contented could I be with either, were t'other dear charmer away." Whence the fruitful idea of coalition originated it is not necessary to investigate, but the combination of these amusement mastodons was perfected, resulting in a canvas entertainment before which all others "pale their ineffectual fires." Monday is the day appointed for the arrival of this great amusement enterprise in St. Louis, and in anticipation of the event large numbers of excursionists from within a radius of fifty miles are making preparations to visit the city.

The route of the processional pageant, which will take place about 9 o'clock Monday morning, will be as follows: From the show grounds, Twentieth and Olive streets, to Chestnut, down Chestnut to Fifth, down Fifth to Chouteau avenue, up Chouteau avenue to Seventh, up Seventh to Elm, down Elm to Fourth, up Fourth to Franklin avenue, out Franklin avenue to Sixteenth, down Sixteenth to Washington avenue, down Washington avenue to Sixth, down Sixth to Olive, returning by the way of Olive to the show grounds.

Permanent Improvements.

The total value represented by the building permits issued from the office of the Chief of the Fire Department since January 1, 1881, amounts to $3,452,130. Of this, the thirty-nine permits issued during the past week represent $68,115. Of these permits, fourteen are for the erection of brick and five for the erection of frame dwellings; three were for the repair and removal of wood and one for brick dwellings; three were for the erection of frame and three for the erection of brick stables. Two permits have been granted for the erection of stores and three for repairs upon stores. One permit was issued for the erection of a horse-shoeing shop, one for the repair of a horse-shoeing shop, one for the erection of a chair factory, one for the erection of a church and one for the building of an addition to the United States Hospital.

ON 'CHANGE.

Cotton Notes—A New Route—Exchange Gymnasts.

The flaxseed crop, like about everything else, except country grain dealers, is said to be very short.

There has been a sharp advance on "aigs" in Chicago. They are selling up to 22c. St. Louis is not so bullish on this commodity as she is on grain, and prices have not gone up here much.

John J. Halloran leaves to-night for the West, visiting Denver, Pueblo Springs and Santa Fe. He will be gone about sixty days. In his absence M. Whitty will represent Mr. H.'s Chicago and Toledo houses on the floor.

The poor quality of the winter wheat this year is shown by inspection in this market. Although grades were reduced full one-half from last year, not a car of No. 1 has been received here during this month, and the proportion of No. 2 red is from a third to a half of the inspections, chiefly a third.

The C., B. & Q. road has obtained control of the Keokuk and St. Louis road, and, it is stated, will begin sending a large amount of grain over that line to St. Louis, thus reaching this side of the river, where there is plenty of elevator room. Five hundred cars of grain will come by that route.

Said a broker: "If the average last year on cotton was 91 out of a possible 100 and the crop 6,600,000 bales, I figure that this year, with the average of '72, as reported by the Agricultural Bureau, out of a possible 100 the crop should be 5,200,000 bales, a loss of 19 per cent.

One of Charley Slayback's country customers, lulled by the monotonous drone of to-day's calling, fell fast asleep at the call to-day. Within five minutes after his eyes closed his hat was decorated with cards bearing inscriptions of "Slayback's sleeping beauty," "Long on cotton," "Hush-a-by, baby." He was an irate fellow when he woke up and discovered how he had been made the butt of the crowd.

Cotton appears to be an enigma to the speculative crowd and a source of constant worry and anxiety in consequence. New York opened this morning 2@8c lower than the already low prices of yesterday's close, the most weakness being in the near-by options and the far-off months losing little. From this depression she rallied and advanced, though not enough to put much heart in the crowd of longs who gazed sad-eyed at the chalk-marks. The outlook just now is not the best for these longs either, and a New York house write their correspondents that even present prices are critical.

Sensible Barnum.

Barnum is bitterly opposed to advertising in his "great moral show." It is understood C. H. Sampson made a handsome offer for the privilege of advertising the famous Corticelli silk, but Barnum's agent insisted that the surprises of 1879 could not be repeated this year.

Fun at High Mass.

It is quite certain that the congregation at the 10 o'clock mass to-morrow morning at St. Bridget's church will be something abnormal. The silvery-tongued pastor, Father Walsh, generally has large audiences, but the expectation that there will be music in the air at the Church to-morrow will test the seating capacity of the church to its utmost. It appears that there has been considerable trouble between Father Walsh and the Young America Land League, and to-morrow the reverend gentleman means to speak of two or three of the patriotic leaguers by name from the altar, in no complimentary manner. Father Walsh has had a great deal of trouble with the Land Leagues ever since their start. He opposed the movement at first, and as a consequence was mercilessly boycotted. All of the Irish societies renting St. Bridget's Hall withdrew from it, and the revenues of the parish were considerably diminished. When Redpath was here he seems to have converted the reverend gentleman to the Land League idea, and for a time Father Walsh was heart and soul with the movement. Just what is at the bottom of the Young America Lodge has not been told, further than that that organization has had quite a row with its treasurer, Hon. Joseph O'Neil. The Land Leaguers will accordingly turn out in force to-morrow.

Work of Art.

An excellent life-size portrait of Samuel L. Hill, who forty-three years ago founded the prosperous Corticelli Mills, has just been finished by one of our prominent artists for the Corticelli silk office in this city.

Back Again to Business.

Mr. F. J. Comstock, of the furniture firm of Burrell, Comstock & Co., Nos. 402 and 404 North Fourth street, has just returned from the East, and is once more smilingly receiving patrons of the well-known establishment. While Mr. Comstock was East he combined business with pleasure, and has secured for his stock all the latest novelties in the furniture line. It is really surprising as well as pleasing to look around at the many charming and fantastic shapes chairs, sofas and other articles have taken recently. Burrell, Comstock & Co. have on their four large floors the newest and best things in their line, all fresh from the East's metropolitan source of fashion. Ladies seem greatly delighted with the novelties.

Free Water for Horses.

The public drinking fountain for horses and dogs erected by the Humane Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, on Third street just north of Washington avenue, is completed, and the water will be turned on on Monday next at 12 o'clock noon. The public are specially invited to be present on this important occasion, which marks a new era in the history of our city, the development of of a regard for the comfort and health beasts of burden which is highly commendable.

NORTH ST. LOUIS ITEMS.

This morning Detective Wm. Walsh recovered the harness that was stolen a few nights ago from Dr. Marsh's stable, 2214 N. Fourteenth street.

Frank Stanze, the well-known grocer merchant, has just returned from a month's trip to Denver, Col., where he was united in marriage to Miss Marie Stuart.

The members of the Evening Star Social and Literary Union are making extensive arrangements to give a grand oyster supper to their lady friends next Tuesday evening at the North St. Louis Turners' Hall, Fourteenth and Salisbury streets.

It is rumored that Rev. Andrew Eustace, pastor of St. Michael's Church, Eleventh and Exchange streets, is to leave the diocese of St. Louis and put himself under the jurisdiction of his old friend, Dr. McMullin, the newly appointed Bishop of Davenport.

Trustees' Sales.

WHEREAS by their deed of trust dated May 24, 1879, and recorded in the Recorder's office of the city of St. Louis and State of Missouri, in book 621 on page 60, Catharine Johannah Brohammer, John J. Brohammer, Mary E. Brohammer, Peter A. Brohammer and Autilda Sibella Brohammer, all single persons, conveyed to Max. Mierson, as trustee in said deed, to secure the payment of several notes in said deed described, the following real estate, situated in the city of St. Louis and State of Missouri, to wit: A certain lot of ground commencing 40 feet east of where the north line of Chouteau avenue crosses the east line of Third street, thence north 66 feet more or less to north line of said lot, thence east 40 feet, thence south 66 feet more or less to north line of Chouteau avenue, thence west on north line of Chouteau avenue 40 feet to place of beginning And whereas default has been made in the payment of one of the notes, being the one maturing first, which is long since due and remains unpaid, whereby all of said notes have become due and are unpaid; and whereas said Max Mierson declines to act as such trustee, and whereas the Sheriff of the city of St. Louis also refuses to act as trustee under the deed, and whereas the Circuit Court of the city of St. Louis in August, 1881, by its proper order appointed the undersigned as such trustee in said deed of trust; now, therefore, at the request of the legal holder of the said note first maturing in said deed of trust, I will, on between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the east front door of the Court-house in said city of St. Louis, sell the above described property at public sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, for the purposes of said trust.

JAMES W. T. GRAHAM,
